HENRY GEORGE is going to start a paper.

ARBOR DAY was successfully inaugurated in San Francisco yesterday.

WORK is being pushed with an additional force of men on the Newhall extension.

NEARLY all the Democratic Congressmen favor a revision of the present tariff laws.

FRANK W. GROSS, journalist, is said to be slowly dying of consumption in San Francisco.

THE stockmen of St. Louis are still striving hard to defeat the working of the bull butter bill.

THE blunders of a telegraph operator resulted in a railroad collision and loss of life at Kansas City yesterday.

THE latest by mail is that Holtt's majority over Moulder for Superintendent of Public Instruction is 91 votes.

THE Roumanian government has definitely selected Prince Ferdinand of Hohenzollern as heir to the throne. Next!

STANLEY, the explorer, has arrived in New York, and will lecture. He speaks enthusiastically of the resources of the Congo country.

MATTERS begin to look grave again in Ireland. The services of the Grand Old Man will probably have to be called upon to straighten out the tangled web of Irish affairs.

PARTICULARS of an interesting trotting match in San Francisco will be found in our telegraphic columns. California is looming up as a breeding ground for fast horses.

THE Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Company has announced its intention of building at once to Chicago. This company bids fair to become, before long, the most important railroad corporation in the world.

THE wires bring more unsavory details of English low life in high places. It is possible that the English upper classes are not more corrupt than those of other countries, but in that case the telegraphic news gatherers are very particular in their selection of matter.

THE season for Eastern visitors has scarcely commenced, yet accommodations are already insufficient for the throng that is arriving, and this although hotels and lodging-houses have been doubled during the past year. Los Angeles is growing too fast for her clothes.

THE most weighty argument that can be adduced, as to the permanency of the unexampled prosperity which Southern California is at present enjoying, may be found in the rivalry which exists among the various railroad companies as to which shall first "grid-iron" this section with their rails. These great corporations do not work upon any sentimental theories, nor do they act without due and careful deliberation. They are not only well informed as to the probable future of a place, but they have it in their power, to a great extent, to make that future. For these reasons, the fact that they are all so anxious to obtain a strong foothold here is the most promising of all the hopeful signs that brighten the horizon of this favored region.

HERE are some plain truths uttered by the Santa Cruz Sentinel, which will receive the indorsement of right-meaning and right-acting citizens, without much respect to party:

It will not do to nominate men to office because they are good fellows, and possessed of a "sack" which they are expected to open to mercenary politicians who are to serve as distributors, placing one dollar where they proclaim it will "do the most good," and the other dollar in their own pockets.

A man who has a badly clouded public or private record, or who does not meet his honest obligations among men, should never be placed on any ticket, State, county or township, and if he is so placed, and the voter finds out his short-comings, no unpardonable political offense is committed if scratching is resorted to.

If this last sentiment was not fully verified by actual results in the late election, then we do not understand the significance of the pencil in the hands of the incensed voter. But scratching can be averted. It is a perfectly easy matter for political conventions to avert it. Let them studiously and unerringly make good nominations, and they will enable every voter short of a crank or a lunatic to go to the polls without a pencil in his hand, and with a straight ticket, which he will vote.

A GREAT RACE.

Harry Wilkes's Splendid Performance Yesterday.

He Justifies the Confidence of His Backers.

A Fine Day and an Immense Attendance.

Bay District Park Crowded With Enthusiastic Lovers of the Turf—The Fair Sex Grace the Scene—Time: 2:15, 2:16 1-2, 2:15.

By Telegraph to The Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—[By the Western Associated Press.] One of the greatest trotting matches that ever occurred on this coast, and one which has been the subject of much interest all over the country, took place at the Bay District Park to-day. The attendance was the largest seen here in many years, estimated at nearly ten thousand. There was a heavy influx of visitors from outside of the city, most of the sporting fraternity from all over the coast being present. The weather was most favorable, the sun shining brightly, while not a breath of air was stirring. The fair sex was present in goodly numbers, and manifested much interest in the sport. The match was for a purse of $5000, $3000 to the first horse, $1500 to the second, and $500 to the third. The following horses started: Harry Wilkes, Guy Wilkes, Arab, Antevolo and Charlie Hilton. Oliver K., who was advertised to start, did not make his appearance. Betting was very heavy and lively. Before the first heat Harry Wilkes was a big favorite, selling for $120, Guy Wilkes bringing $50, and Arab, Hilton and Antevolo, comprising the field, selling for $40. A good start was effected for the first heat, Arab and Antevolo slightly leading. They maintained the lead to the quarter, when Harry Wilkes moved up and was leading the procession by a length at the half. When the three-quarter pole was reached Harry had increased his lead two lengths, while Guy moved up to second place. Coming down the stretch Harry increased his lead and jogged in, an easy winner; Guy second, Antevolo a good third. Time, 2:15¼. Arab went lame and was withdrawn after this heat.

Pools before the second heat sold: Harry, $100; the field, $25. They were sent off to a capital start, Harry and Guy slightly leading. Before the one-eighth pole was reached they both broke badly. Guy, however, was first on his feet and immediately assumed the lead, Harry acting badly. At the quarter they were all strung out, Guy leading, Antevolo second, Hilton third, Harry fourth, fully fifteen lengths behind. Going down back stretch, Harry trotted very fast, and decreased Guy's lead to half a dozen lengths. When they reached three-quarter pole, Guy was leading by three lengths, Harry now being second. By a terrible burst of speed down the stretch he was nearly on even terms, with the leader 100 yards from the string. At this point Guy broke and Harry forged ahead winning the heat by half a length, Guy second, Antevolo third. Time, 2:16¼.

After this heat it was considered almost certain that Harry would win and there were no pools sold. After several attempts they were sent off to a rather bad start, in which Harry was three lengths in the rear. Guy took the pole and trotted very fast. He was first at the quarter by a half dozen lengths and at the half by the same distance. The others were strung out, Harry being last. When the three-quarters was reached, Guy was still several lengths in the van, while Harry was now second. Harry, seeing no show for this heat, made no effort, and Guy came in an easy winner by six lengths, Harry second, Antevolo third. Time, 2:16¾.

The enthusiasm that prevailed now knew no bounds. Spectators in the grand stand cheered loudly, while ladies were seen to jump up in their seats and wave their handkerchiefs wildly. The result of this heat did not seem to influence betting, as the "talent" still stuck to Harry, and he continued a hot favorite. For the fourth heat they got the word to a fair start. On the first turn Harry took the pole and was leading Guy by two lengths at the quarter, Antevolo third. At the half positions were unchanged, and when the three-quarter was reached Harry increased his lead to three lengths. The race was all over now, and Harry Wilkes crossed the wire first by three lengths; Guy second, Antevolo third, Hilton last. Time, 2:15. The fractions of the last mile were: First quarter, 0:35; half, 1:07½; three-quarters, 1:42.

Failure of Passenger Agents to Form an Association.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—The latest news received from Chicago indicates that the efforts of the passenger agents to form an association for the maintaining of rates have failed. Telegrams were received today from several of the general agents, stating that the meeting had adjourned sine die, and that nothing whatever had been done. The failure to form an association is attributed to the action of the Baltimore and Ohio, which would not agree to any proposition advanced by the other roads. This opposition on the part of the Baltimore and Ohio is said to be due to the fact that the last two meetings of passenger agents were called by A. Ford, of the Pennsylvania line, between which and the Baltimore and Ohio, there exists much antagonism.

An Editor's Assassin on Trial.

VISALIA, Nov. 27.—The trial of Henry Beaver, charged with the murder of Carroll S. Hayes, editor of the Traver Tidings, at Lemoore, on the 19th day of last September, has now reached the close of the second day. About 120 witnesses are summoned in the case. The defendant was present, accompanied by his father and mother. Miss Lula Smith, of whom Mr. Hayes was an accepted suitor, and her mother, sister and father have occupied the witness stand this afternoon. The testimony shows that defendant was a rejected suitor still seeking a recognition of love from Miss Smith, who was betrothed to Mr. Hayes, the deceased.

A Fall in Grain.

SAN FERNANDO, Nov. 27.—To-day a pile of about 500 sacks of grain in George Porter's warehouse tumbled down, burying two workmen, named M. Henchetti and Louis Harquatra, beneath it. The former, when dug out, was apparently lifeless, though still breathing. He is injured internally and cannot recover. The latter is injured internally, though not seriously.

A $1,000,000 FIRE.

Destruction of Two Large Grain Elevators in Duluth, Minn.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—[By the Western Associated Press.] A Duluth special to the St. Paul Pioneer Press says: At 6 o'clock this evening a fire broke out in the top of elevator "2," in the eastern part of town, and in spite of the efforts of the fire department the flames communicated to the annex elevator, to a new building near completion, and finally to elevator "A," across the tracks, and all were consumed, together with a row of nine frame buildings, dwellings and stores north of "2." Four men in "2," where the fire broke out, escaped easily. Chas. Moore, watchman, after being severely burned, dropped from the cupola 80 feet and was killed. A man named Laurozche and a fireman, Chas. Lee, are missing. Elevator "2" was built two years ago by the Duluth and Western Elevator Company. Among the owners are D. G. Cupler, W. W. Davis, S. A. Gilbert and C. Cofield, of this city, and Geo. H. Cristine, of Minneapolis, who was its lessee. It cost $80,000 and about $5000 had been expended on its annex. The capacity of elevator "2" was 500,000 bushels, and there were in store 40,000 bushels. Elevator "A" was owned by the Union Improvement and Elevator Company—Col. C. H. Graves, of Duluth, president; J. B. Chittendor, of New York, vice-president. The building was valued at $125,000. It has in store 350,000 bushels of wheat, 113,000 of corn and 11,000 of flaxseed. The total loss of grain was 880,000 bushels, valued at $58,500. The salvage on the grain is about 10 per cent. The grain was owned by Duluth and outside parties, mainly in small lots. Loss on elevators and grain aggregate $840,000; insured for about $600,000, the elevators being insured for about three-fourths of their value, and the grain generally for its full value.

CROOKED BANK OFFICIALS.

Arrest of the President and Other Bank Officers.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.—[By the Western Associated Press.] Considerable mystery envelopes the affairs of the First National Bank of Glen Rock, York county, Pennsylvania. Within a short time the president and cashier have been deposed and new officers elected. The reason for this action was not made apparent until the issuance of warrants last evening, by Henry Edmunds, United States Commissioner, for the arrest of William Herbert, late president of the bank, Henry Siebst, late cashier, and Jacob Herbert and William Herbert, sons of the president. The Herberts compose the firm of Herbert & Sons, of Glen Rock. United States Marshal Kerns caused the arrest of the parties simultaneously this morning. Monday afternoon all the defendants will be present to answer the charge of embezzling the funds of the bank, amounting to $750,000.

THE BILLIARD TOURNAMENT.

Slosson the Winner in the First Night's Play.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 27.—[By the Western Associated Press.] The first two games at cushion carom billiards between George F. Slosson, of Chicago, and Jacob Schaeffer, of this city, were played at Masonic Hall this evening. The games are each for $2000 a side and gate receipts, 500 points on a regular 3x10 table. In the 110th run Schaeffer succeeded in getting one point ahead of his adversary, the score standing 423 to 421, but he held the lead for only one moment, Slosson taking it again and holding it to the finish, winning by 31 points. Toward the close Schaeffer rallied, but could not last, and the close was rather tame. Slosson's average was 48. Time of game, 3 hours and 30 minutes.

An Extensive Mail Robbery.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 27.—Twenty-two sacks, containing mails from England to Germany, Russia, Austria and the East, while in transit on the train to Belgium to-day, were cut open and plundered of all registered letters. Other letters were not touched. The robbery was discovered upon the arrival of the train at Verviers. Letters from America, containing money and diamonds to the amount of £40,000, were stolen. It is supposed that the authors of the robbery are mis-creants who were implicated in the recent thefts of English mails.

Connection of the Canadian Pacific Road with Boston.

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—A special from Ottawa says: General Manager Van Horn, of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, says he has concluded arrangements with the Boston and Lowell Railroad to reach Boston, which will be made the principal winter terminus of his road. The papers will be signed early next week. Connection from Montreal will be made with Newport, Vt., over the Southeastern road; thence to Woodsville, N. H., over the Lowell road.

Despondent Englishman's Fate.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—Arthur Francis Flower Ellis, an English tourist, who arrived here about a month ago, committed suicide by taking poison to-day, at the lodging-house, 40½ Geary street, where he has been lately stopping. He was aged 30 years, and from letters which he left, addressed to friends and relatives in England, he was evidently well connected. When he arrived here he put up at the Palace Hotel, but later moved to lodgings. As far as can be learned his act was caused by despondency brought on by dissipation.

A Revision Necessary.

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—Some weeks ago the Globe sent letters of inquiry to leading Democratic Congressmen, asking their opinion as to what action Congress should take upon the tariff question at the coming session. Nearly all the replies favor a revision of the present laws, though they differ as to the means by which it should be accomplished.

Fell Down a Shaft—A Hunter's Mistake.

JACKSON, Nov. 27.—Last night a miner named James Podesta, fell down an upraise in Mammoth mine tunnel, a distance of 200 feet, killing him instantly.

J. E. Buchanan was brought here from West Point last night for surgical treatment. He had a load of buckshot in him, having been mistaken by a hunter for a deer.

A Sad Occurrence.

CLOVERDALE, Nov. 27.—C. Perry Elliott committed suicide to-day by shooting himself through the head with a revolver. He had been suffering with a gathering in the head for some time, and had stated at several different times his intention to take his life. He was 30 years of age, of steady habits, and highly respected by all who knew him.

A SPECK OF WAR.

The Irish Question Assuming Grave Proportions.

Excitement in London Clubs Over the Arrest of Dillon.

The Agitators Must Remain Passive or Go to Prison.

The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland Forbids the Holding of Proposed National Meetings—Troops to be Reenforced by at Least 4000 Men.

By Telegraph to The Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—A special dispatch from London in the Call this morning says: The arrest of John Dillon is the leading topic. The London clubs are much excited over the affair, and naturally approve the decision of the government. In political, as well as in club circles, the opinion is generally expressed that Parnell and other Irish leaders will be likely to find themselves in prison before the opening of Parliament. Timothy Harrington, M. P., secretary of the Irish National League, in an interview, said: "I regard the prosecution of Dillon as a great victory for the Irish party. By its action the government admits the complete failure of their rule in Ireland, under existing laws, and have taken the first step in a series of press prosecutions, imprisonment of Irish leaders and prohibitions of meetings, which will doubtless follow. If Dillon goes to prison the government is likely to have a very uncomfortable time of it, as they could not possibly have seized any one who will win greater sympathy in Great Britain and Ireland."

SATISFACTION OF THE NATIONALISTS.

Thomas Power O Connor cables from London to the Star that the Nationalists rejoice at the prospect of being brought to close quarters with the government, and have no fear of the result. The people were never more united than reports from Ireland represent them to be. It is the universal opinion in Liberal circles that any attempt of strenuous coercion in Ireland will be resented by the English people, and bring about home rule as the only solution of the difficulty.

GRAVE HINTS OF A WARLIKE CHARACTER.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The New York Evening Post's London special says: "Coercion is back again, and in all probability a few days will see all the Parnellite members in prison. Reduced to its simplest form the government's procedure, which is precisely that which was formerly taken against Healy and Davitt, amounts to offering Dillon the choice of holding his tongue or going to prison. He will, of course, promptly accept the latter alternative. Then O'Brien, who left by the mail train to join Dillon in Sligo, will denounce the government in United Ireland, which will be suppressed. By this time Parnell will be compelled to appear upon the scene in defense of his lieutenants and take the leadership in the struggle. If the government ventures to arrest him there will be war. Indeed it is difficult to see how they can avoid it."

TROOPS TO BE REINFORCED.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The government has decided to prosecute other Nationalist leaders next week. The troops in Ireland will be reenforced by at least 4000 men.

NOT ALLOWED TO SPEAK.

DUBLIN, Nov. 27.—Messrs. O'Brien, O'Kelly and MacDonald, Nationalist members of Parliament arrived to-day. Great crowds had assembled at the railway station to greet them. The authorities would not allow the commoners to address the people, and the police cleared the streets, amid much excitement.

PROHIBITION OF NATIONALIST MEETINGS.

DUBLIN, Nov. 27.—A proclamation of the Marquis of Londonderry, Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, prohibiting the holding of an advertised National League meeting at Sligo to-morrow, has been posted throughout Sligo, and has produced great excitement.

THE FRENCH EMBASSY TO THE VATICAN TO CONTINUE.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—In the French Chambers the Premier said that France must not entirely abdicate her present position as a great power. She must prevent the dismemberment of the Ottoman empire, and take possession of Egypt.

M. Dechalin moved a rejection of the sum asked for to maintain the embassy at the Vatican.

M. De Freycinet opposed the motion, dwelling upon the practical usefulness of the embassy. France, he said, having a concordate with the Vatican, by which she was charged with the protection of Catholic missions in the East, which were rendering important service to the country, could not afford to dispense with the embassy.

The sum asked for was granted, the vote standing 291 against 250.

FRENCH SYMPATHY FOR THE CHICAGO ANARCHISTS.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—The Municipal Council of Paris has requested United States Minister McLane to intercede with the Governor of Illinois in behalf of the condemned Anarchists of Chicago.

A Doomed Town.

VICTORIA (B. C.), Nov. 27.—The town of Yale, the scene of the first mining excitement on the Frazer River, which has been several times before destroyed by fire, was again partly burned Thursday night. Incendiarism is supposed to be the cause. The town has been deserted since the railway opened for traffic.

The Dreaded Scourge.

BUENOS AYRES, Nov. 27.—The spread of the cholera in Rosario creates great alarm. Yesterday there was 72 new cases and 54 deaths at Cordia; 5 cases were reported today. Congress had adjourned owing to the visitation of the dread disease.

Fire at Cherokee.

OROVILLE, Nov. 27.—A fire this morning at Cherokee, 13 miles from here, destroyed the store and stock of Mrs. E. O'Hair, valued at $2500, and the barn of A. Ryan, valued at $1000. The fire was accidental. Insurance small.

Removal of Headquarters.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The headquarters of the Anti-Saloon Republican National Committee to-day was formally removed from Chicago to this city, and established at Nos. 33 to 38 East Forty-third street.

THE CAMPBELL CASE.

CONTINUATION OF THE TESTIMONY.

Opening Statement by Counsel for the Defense – Some Damaging Statements Affecting the Character of the Plaintiff.

By Telegraph to The Times.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—[By the Western Associated Press.] In the Campbell divorce case, plaintiff's counsel closed her side of the case to-day. Lady Miles was cross-examined. Certain letters written by witness to defendant were produced, and she was asked if they were hers. She said they were, and added that when she wrote them she thought she was writing to a man of honor—not such a person as Lord Colin Campbell had turned out to be—that she still thought a woman's letter should be considered sacred. [Applause.] Lord Colin had told witness he was endeavoring to obtain all information he possibly could against his wife, in order to sue her for a divorce, and had subsequently told witness that he had failed to obtain any. Mr. Russell, plaintiff's counsel, corrected his opening statement by adding to it that Lady Campbell, when she married defendant, brought him a fortune of £300,000. Russell then gave notice that plaintiff's case was closed. Robert Bannalyne Finlay opened the case for the defense. He said it afforded itself possible relief to Lord Campbell to have an opportunity to defend himself in open court from gross and cruel implications which had been put upon him, and from the charge of adultery, which had been trumped up. Lady Campbell's mother had been told the nature of defendant's ailment before marriage, but she nevertheless urged on union, saying her daughter was willing to act merely as a nurse to her husband, and even wrote to the Duke of Argyle to press upon him a fulfillment of the engagement. During Easter season of 1885 the Duke of Marlborough, who had been corresponding with her, was afterward seen in Lady Campbell's company. They visited Leigh Court at the same time, and their bedrooms there adjoined, doubtless. Finlay contended that the Duke of Marlborough and Lady Campbell at this time were criminally intimate, if they had not been before. After this Lady Campbell went to Paris, and on this journey she was chaperoned by Lady Miles. They remained in Paris one month, the Duke of Marlborough being there all the time. Lady Campbell returned from Paris she sent her maid to Switzerland, evidently, as has before been said, because the maid knew too much. The maid would be called by the defense, and would testify that on the 12th of August Lady Campbell went to Puerfleet Hotel and remained there with the Duke of Marlborough until the following Monday. Gen. Butler visited Lady Campbell during her husband's absence and used to remain with her as long as three hours at a time. Once during these interviews some one wanted to see Lady Campbell. She came out of her room, her hair disarranged and shouted "not at home" and returned to Gen. Butler. In the meantime Lord Campbell came home unexpectedly, and while he was still in one of the rooms down stairs, Gen. Butler stepped out on tip-toe without meeting the husband. That same evening Lady Campbell was taken ill. Lord Campbell remained in Leigh Court from August, 1885, to February, 1883, and during that time Lady Campbell went to and from London, and committed adultery with Dr. Bird. Lord Campbell then knew nothing about his wife's bad conduct, but she had a guilty conscience and got Solicitor Lewis to write a letter charging Lord Campbell with giving her a loathsome disease, and refusing to live with him as his wife. Lord Campbell had never heard of such a charge before, and of course refused to agree that they should not live as man and wife.

Finlay then made a long argument, showing that Lady Campbell had been guilty of improper relations with the Duke of Marlborough, Gen. Butler and Dr. Bird.

No Bull Butter in Theirs.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.), Nov. 27.—A large meeting of stockmen and citizens was held at the National Stockyards this afternoon, to consider matters pertaining to oleomargarine interests. A memorial to Congress was drafted, and signed by all of the commission merchants, Live Stock Exchange, and several hundred citizens, setting forth the objectionable features of the oleomargarine bill, and the bad effects they have had, especially in aiding large manufacturers and crushing out small ones, as well as throwing out of work several thousand men, and particularly praying that special licenses be reduced.

Explorer Stanley's Arrival.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer, is in New York, having arrived last night. He comes here for the purpose of lecturing on Africa. He speaks very glowingly of the rich resources of the Congo free states, and says that if the Belgian syndicate carries out its project to build a railway from a point 110 miles up from the mouth of the Congo for a distance of 230 miles to Stanley Pool, the future of that dark country will be an immense one; but, he adds, without this railway the Congo might as well be in the moon for all the benefit white man will derive from it.

Apparently Incendiary.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—At the investigation of the Continental Hotel fire, by the City Fire Inspectors, to-day, four witnesses were examined. B. T. Tomlinson, who had boarded at the hotel for years, and who left on the day preceding the fire, said he had been confidentially warned by Mrs. Rowan, who was in charge of the hotel, and that he in turn warned several other friends who left on the same day. No arrests have been made.

The Roumanian Congress Convened.

BUCHAREST, Nov. 27.—The Roumanian Chambers opened to-day. In a speech King Charles expressed himself as hopeful of the continuance of peace. He also announced that Prince Ferdinand, of Hohenzollern, had been definitely selected as heir to the throne, Roumania's present King being childless.

LUCKY BALDWIN'S STABLES.

An Exhaustive Review by a Competent Authority.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—[By Western Associated Press.] The Horseman this week, in a long review of the year's work of the Baldwin stables, says: "The Santa Anita stable stands second to Dyer Brothers in the total amount of winnings for the season. The season of 1885 was not satisfactory to Baldwin, and he made an entire change in his trainers, jockeys, etc. This was a wise move, and J. L. McClellan has placed himself in the front rank of his profession by fitting the horses under his care to cope with their Eastern opponents with such uniform results. Much of the stables' success, however, can be credited to the painstaking, honest effort of Isaac Murphy, head jockey. Volante was the greatest winner, but, considering age and past performances, Lucky B. is the phenomenon of the lot. For several seasons past this old horse was practically worthless as a racehorse, no doubt due to training, but this season he is a large winner, and has shown ability to run fast and stay over any distance of ground in the best company. Grisette, Laredo and Goliah have shown themselves to be high-class two-year-olds, and they should make "clinking" good three-year-olds, and it is more than likely that this stable will be stronger than ever in 1887. During the season, not including the Pacific Coast fall meeting, Baldwin's horses started in one hundred and ninety-five races, of which they won fifty-four, ran second in thirty-one, third in thirty-five and unplaced in seventy-five. The total winnings in stakes and purses foot up the grand sum of $95,955. Of this sum Volante won $50,815; Silver Cloud, $12,870; Lucky B., $12,815; Grisette, $11,170; Laredo, $9014; Mollie McCarty's Last, $8792; Solid Silver, $7535; Estrella, $7290; Goliah, $4265; Bonita, $600; Lijero, $400; Glen Almond, $405; Santa Anita Belle, $75. Pendennis and Rapid were the only horses who failed to get placed in races. They ran the former in four races and the latter in one."

ARBOR DAY.

A Successful Inauguration of the Event.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—[By the Western Associated Press.] The inauguration of Arbor day in this city, on Goat Island and the Presidio, was a great success. The arrangements for the transportation of passengers to Goat Island were perfect. Fully 2000 people were present on the island—half of whom were prepared with trowels and trees. After the literary exercises were completed, Gen. Vallejo planted the first tree. Mr. Sutro and Gen. Howard then planted their shoots, the school children following. When all the trees had been planted the people took their departure for the main land. At the Presidio 10,000 persons assembled. After literary exercises the school children planted the trees which had been previously furnished them. The planting occupied about an hour, when it was completed the assembly dispersed. Thus ended what no doubt is destined to be an important day in California.

Capsizing and Loss of Life.

BALTIMORE (Md.), Nov. 27.—Capt. Veazey, of the steamboat Enoch Pratt, which arrived this morning, reports that during the storm Thursday afternoon and night two "Bug Eyes" engaged in oyster catching in the mouth of Manolkin River, off Hiney Island, were capsized and all hands drowned, except the captain of one of the boats. The names of the "Bug Eyes" could not be learned. It is probable that other disasters will be reported, as many oyster boats were exposed to the gale, which was unusually severe.

An Operator's Blunder.

KANSAS CITY (Mo.), Nov. 27.—The Missouri Pacific passenger train, due here at 7:30 this morning, collided with a freight train near Gillenwood, twenty miles east of this city. The engines were wrecked. Elijah Magoffin, postal clerk, was killed, and P. H. Bebee, another clerk, is in a dying condition. The accident was caused by the blunder of a telegraph operator at Greenwood, who sent forward a wrong train.

The Milwaukee Rioters.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 27.—R. N. Austin began his closing argument for the defense in the trial of the Milwaukee garden rioters this afternoon. He will be followed by McKenny for the State, who will close the case. It is thought that Judge Sloan will charge the jury late this afternoon. Another of the defendants was discharged by the judge in the morning, viz, Joseph Wojciehowski. This makes two who have been discharged.

The Kentucky Horror.

LOUISVILLE (Ky.), Nov. 27.—A Courier-Journal special say: "As developments are made the Knox county (Ky.) affair assumes a more fiendish aspect. It is undoubtedly true that Mrs. Poe and her two lady guests were raped and, together with five children, murdered and then burned in the house. The demons who did it are not positively known, though suspicion rests upon one John Warm and his alleged wife, who were neighbors of the Poes."

The Soldiers' Home.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—From a report of the Board of Commissioners of the Soldiers' Home it appears that 310 persons were admitted to the Home during the year, 93 inmates discharged at their own request, 5 dismissed, 30 suspended and 41 died. There are now 894 regular and 53 temporary inmates at the Home.

Sale of Porter Ashe's Stable.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—R. Porter Ashe's racing stable, consisting of six horses, was sold to-day at the Bay District park, Guenn went to Haggin for $5000, and Bihmettie to Clayton for $2500. The remaining four brought $2200.

Important Land Purchase.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—Block 16, adjoining the Southern Pacific Company's freight sheds, and bounded on three sides by Fourth, King and Berry streets, has been purchased by the Southern Pacific Company for $195,000.

An Assignment.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 27.—J. & S. B. Sachs, boot and shoe manufacturers, 109 West Pearl street, assigned to-day; assets, $100,000; liabilities, $200,000. The failure causes surprise.

The Manchester Handicap.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The third and last race of the Manchester November meeting was won by Stourhead; Springfield second; Chevalier Ginstrelli's Raffaello third; ten starters.

Moses in the Wilderness.

[San Diego Sun, Nov. 23.]

H. H. Bancroft, the historian, is expected here soon en route for Mexico, where he has a large staff employed gathering in data from that ever interesting country. The very impulse that has started up San Diego from her former inertia, will materially assist in bringing that country nearer to us. Mr. Bancroft's recent researches will also assist the International Colonization Company in settling up that country. If Mr. Bancroft could out a practical geologist on his Lower California staff and show up the resources for irrigation, he would discount Moses in the wilderness.

TIRED OF LIFE.

THREE SUICIDES IN THE BAY CITY YESTERDAY.

An Old-time Stock Deal—Mamie Kelly's Murderer—An Enterprising Railroad Company—A Fatal Accident.

By Telegraph to The Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—[By the Western Associated Press.] John Buzza, a young Englishman, a miner by occupation, committed suicide this morning in his room, at the New Wisconsin Hotel, by cutting his throat with a razor. The act was probably committed during a fit of despondency caused by ill health.

SUICIDE OF A PRISONER.

Frank Davis, an inmate of the county jail, under arrest for grand larceny, tried to brain himself in his cell yesterday. He was afterward placed in a straight-jacket. Since the execution of Fong Ah Sing he has shown symptoms of insanity, and imagines the Sheriff is making preparations to hang him. Davis died this afternoon from concussion of the brain.

William Faas, a despondent cabinet-maker, committed suicide last night, by hanging himself, at his residence. He was 54 years old.

An Old-Fashioned Stock Deal.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—There is great excitement in the Mining Stock Board to-day. There was a general rise all along the line. The largest advances were in Best and Belcher, which closed yesterday at 2¼ and closed to-day at 12¾. Consolidated California-Virginia closed yesterday at 19¾; opened to-day at 21¾ and closed at 35. Ophir closed yesterday at 9¼; opened to-day at 10⅜ and closed at 12¾. The sales were very large.

The Goldenson Case.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—It was expected that the case of Alex. Goldenson, the murderer of Mamie Kelly, would come up to-day on a motion of a change of venue, but defendant's counsel did not appear. The case is set for trial for one week from Monday next.

Pushing Work.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—An additional force of men have lately been put on the Newhall extension. Work is progressing rapidly, and the Southern Pacific expects to reach Ventura in January and Santa Barbara in May.

A Fatal Fall.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—A. Sturgeon, a carpenter, while working on Flood's new building, corner of Fourth and Market streets, fell out of a window in the fourth story. His injuries will prove fatal. Sturgeon is a man of middle age and unmarried.

Fruit Train Rates.

The committee of the Sacramento Horticultural Convention, which waited on General Manager A. N. Towne, of the Southern Pacific Company, was only partially successful in its effort to get freight on fruit to the East reduced. The committee desired to secure the following terms: Passenger train time to New York, Philadelphia and Boston, $400 per car; passenger train to Chicago, $300 per car; slow freight to Chicago, $200; that ten cars hereafter comprise a $600 fruit train. Manager Towne intimated that the sweeping reduction asked for could not be granted, as it would be impossible, in his opinion, to make terms with Eastern lines that would permit it. A willingness, however, was intimated to attach fruit cars to regular passenger trains as far as Chicago at $300 per car to carry freight at $250 per car. Mr. Towne promised to consult Eastern lines, however, in regard to the whole matter. The present rates East are as follows: Passenger time to New York, $800; slow freight, $400; passenger time to Chicago, $600; slow freight $300.

Ohio Journalistsin New York.

[Columbus (O.) Dispatch.]

Attention has been called by the enterprising editor of our valued exchange, the Springfield Globe Republic, to a fact which will undoubtedly tend to still further swell the proportions of Buckeye pride. This fact is that Ohio journalists are not only coming to the front, but are really taking the lead in New York journalism. The editor and proprietor of the Tribune is Whitelaw Reid, whose first breath was saturated with the pure farm air which mantles the fertile uplands about Cedarville. The managing editor of the Herald is Julius Chambers, through whose youthful whiskers blew the salubrious zephyrs of Licking county. The editor of the World is none other than Col. Cockerill, whose brilliant intellect was thoroughly trained in hunting the festive rabbit in Buckeye cabbage patches. And then there is Hamilton Busbey, editor of the Turf, Field and Farm, the sweetest chestnut of whose reminiscences is the memory of his career on the old Springfield Republic. Another Ohio man, Quincy A. Petts, is editor of the Mechanical News. This does not complete the list, for is not that gifted journalist and finest of gentlemen, our old friend Sam Johnson, now on the staff of the New York World? And is not the literary editor of Harper's, W. D. Howell's, an old Ohio boy? Hurrah! for the mother of journalists.

FEATS OF COWBOYS.

"Buffalo Bill" Romances Cast into the Shade by the Reality.

Says a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, describing a recent fair at Albuquerque, N. M.: "At three o'clock a drove of wild Texan steers were turned loose in the inclosure, and a large number of cowboys began the task of lassoing them, the boy who lassoed the greatest number to be declared the winner. It was a glorious sight—those stalwart young men mounted upon broncho horses of highest mettle and speed, their brown cheeks glowing with health, and their dark eyes flashing with excitement. The fence around the inside of the race-track had been removed, and on the large oval of green turf in front of the grand stand the steers go plunging and tossing, and the boys go riding after them like so many incarnate whirlwinds. Every now and then an infuriated steer would make straight for a broncho, bent on goring the life out of him and his rider, but the alert cowboy, with his high-spirited steed under the most perfect control, by a single turn of his bridle hand, would wheel him deftly aside, and the fierce bovine would catch nothing on his horns save the circumambient air. The skill displayed in riding and managing the bronchos and throwing the lasso were simply marvelous. Casting the running-noose over the head of the steer while riding at full speed was the most insignificant part of the performance. With the most perfect ease the cowboy would place it around any one of the animal's legs. This is a most difficult feat, and the skill requisite to its accomplishment can be acquired only by long and patient practice. Even then he who seeks to become proficient in it must have an inborn aptitude and dexterity of eye and hand. To perform it the cowboy must determine the spot upon which the swift-running animal must set the foot of the leg around which he desires to draw the noose. Upon this spot he must throw the lasso, and the moment the steer has placed his foot within its slip knot, he must, by a peculiar, indescribable motion of his hand and arm, draw it above the creature's knee and quickly pull it taut. This feat was accomplished many times during the progress of the tournament. Indeed, the number of failures was very insignificant in proportion to the number of trials. The riding was equal to the lassoing. There seems to be no possible position, however difficult or unnatural, and no combination of circumstances, however unfortuitous, in which a cowboy cannot maintain his equilibrium upon and his absolute and complete control of a broncho horse, an animal naturally so wild and vicious that few of the most venturesome and accomplished riders, outside of Mexicans, Indians and cowboys, would dare even to mount him. The man who will show the people of the Eastern cities such a cowboy tournament as I witnessed today at Albuquerque, can undoubtedly become the wealthiest showman of our time, for it is an entertainment so thrilling and exciting that 'Buffalo Bill's Wild West,' and the most daring feats of the circus ring sink into utter insignificance in comparison with it."

The Killing of Thomas Herring—Who Barnum Is.

[Colton Semi-Tropic, Nov. 24.]

Yesterday we had a short paragraph stating that a man named Thomas Herring had been murdered near Gavilan on Saturday last, but we were not able to give the particulars. To-day we have been able to secure further information. It seems that Thomas Herring, the true name of the man murdered, was the owner and in possession of some very valuable quartz claims near Gavilan, near the line of the Rancho Sobrante de San Jacinto, and that a number of Mexicans and white men had been in the habit of stealing ore from the mines, causing Herring to keep a pretty strict watch over the property. On Saturday afternoon Herring was found near one of his mines with the whole side of his head blown off, his body showing evidence that he had just been killed. A search was immediately instituted for the person or persons who committed the deed, which resulted in the arrest of Samuel Barnum, a blacksmith, a man well-known in this valley, having been a resident here for years. Barnum was taken to Riverside, and is now in custody awaiting trial. In conversation with a constable, Barnum denies all knowledge of the crime, and said he had never even spoken to Herring—that he did not even know the man. When arrested, Barnum was prowling around the hills with a shotgun in his possession, ostensibly hunting rabbits.

The Santa Fe.

The Pomona Times-Courier has the following remarks to offer concerning the railroad situation:

"Speculation as to the proposed route of the A. and P. railroad is rife, and is engaging the attention of the newspapers and the people generally in all quarters of the county. The Times-Courier has taken some trouble to ascertain something definite in relation to the proposed work of this company, and while our conclusions cannot be regarded as official, we have obtained our information from a source which leaves not a shadow of doubt in our mind that ours is the true theory. The through line from San Bernardino to Los Angeles is at last outlined. The surveying party started last week from Third street, San Bernardino, passing along Tenth street, Ontario, and about 200 or 400 feet north of the Loop and Meserve tract. This enables the road to make the Mud Springs in a nearly uniform and even grade, avoiding the present improved places along the route. From Mud Springs the surveyors are now seeking the most feasible and practicable route to the company's new depot grounds in Los Angeles. The air is full of rumors of other roads, to parallel, etc., which we let pass for future development. That this is to be the grand through route, every one conversant with the different lines proposed, has always believed. It is direct from San Bernardino; of easy and cheap construction, there is no danger of washouts, no costly cutting or filling, and is only about two-thirds the distance of any other through route proposed thus far. The country to be crossed is one of the best watered and best adapted to fruit culture in the State."

An Indorsement.

Though many pleasant things have been printed concerning the recent exhibits made by Dr. O. B. Bird with the stereopticon, one fact which should be known has been left unmentioned; a fact witnessing no less strongly to the importance of the principles of temperance than to the benevolence of the gentleman himself. Love for a cause having supplanted personal ambition, with characteristic whole-heartedness, he devotes himself and his time to the advancement of the cause. He leaves the practice of (homeopathic) medicine and surgery, which he has successfully followed for sixteen years, to engage in this work.

One-half of the proceeds of these entertainments goes to the local W. C. T. U., and the other half to the State organization; in Southern California, to the building fund. The W. C. T. U. of Los Angeles gives him the most unqualified indorsement, and recommends him to the full confidence of the W. C. T. U. everywhere, as a gentleman, a scholar and a philanthropist. By order of State Executive Committee, W. C. T. U.

Los Angeles, Nov. 27.

Court Notes.

In Judge Brunson's court, in the case of Wing Ho vs. E. J. Baldwin, a jury trial was demanded by the defendant. After the jury had been drawn it was announced that the case had been settled, and it was accordingly dismissed.

Judge Austin discharged Teodosia de Sepulveda, charged with disturbing the peace and battery; also Manuel Lopez and A. Gosman, charged with grand larceny.

JOHN H. WHITE.

The Sovereign Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, which met in Boston, during the week of October 20th, elected John H. White, of New York, to succeed Mr. Gary, of Baltimore, as Grand Sire. The meeting in Boston was characterized by a splendor and magnificence rarely if ever before displayed by the order; the parade of Wednesday, September 22d, being especially brilliant. Grand Sire White took his seat and first officiated at the session of Wednesday 22d, at which a vast amount of business was transacted. At the meeting it was determined to establish the meeting place of the Sovereign Grand Lodge at Columbus, Ohio. An interesting fight was had over the question, and Chicago was, until the last ballot, a close competitor with Columbus, as that place was only chosen by a majority of a few votes. Grand Sire John H. White, who becomes the supreme head of the order in the United States, is a man of sterling qualities, and one who in his bearing as well as by his reputation will reflect honor even upon so august an order as the one which he represents in the office which he has accepted.

Progress in San Bernardino—The Connecting Link.

[San Bernardino Courier, Nov. 25.]

The recent Bogart purchase on the Colton avenue will be the connecting link between San Bernardino and its chief suburbs. Before many months rows of houses, dwelling and business both, will line the avenue. If the Southern Pacific comes in and establishes a depot somewhere in the vicinity of First street, then look out for large wholesale houses along the avenue and in proximity to the depot. Henceforth San Bernardo will be a great distributing center. With the advent of wholesale houses in the near future, this city will supply Lugonia, Banning, San Gorgonio and the San Timoteo cañon—the three latter in part, at least—Redlands and the vast San Bernardino valley, while of course we will have no fell rival for the great and growing trade of Calico, Providence, Barstow, Waterman, Victor, Oro Grande, and the whole northern mining belt. This is as certain as was the advent of the Atlantic and Pacific to a connection with the California Southern two years ago. Business men from the outside see this clearly enough. They are flocking here on the wings of enterprise. Several new officers for business purposes—real estate and commission—have been opened during the week, and the rush has only commenced. San Bernardino is entering upon an era of prosperity which will astonish the most sanguine. It is not merely on real estate that this stimulus is felt. It is clearly discernible in every branch of business. All we have to do now is to be equal to our opportunities.

The Changing Season.

No longer in the groves is seen
The maid, of autumn leaves in quest;
The leaves have long since gathered been,
And in the family Bible pressed.
But those were hours of happiness,
For secret meetings then were planned,
And as she gathered leaves to press
Full oft her lover pressed her hand.

Say; don't know but I have something down on the San Pedro road, only three or four miles out, that I could show you to-day; but those lots on Grand ave., in my tract, only lasted a few hours. All sold."

You will observe by the expressions of the individual in the above conversation, that he is suffering great perturbation of mind on account of his own procrastination—the "putting off to-day of everything that can be done to-morrow." Blaine and Edmunds—Logan and Blaine.

There was unpleasantness, it seems, between Mr. Blaine and Judge Edmunds at the funeral of ex-President Arthur. The papers are full of the episode. The story, as told in the dispatches, may be condensed into this: The two distinguished personages, meeting in the Arthur residence, confronted each other, when Clayton McMichael (who was of the committee, and who tells the story in the New York Times) exclaimed: "I hardly need introduce you, gentlemen." The Senator frankly replied: "Certainly not," and with a courteous bow extended his right hand. Mr. Blaine uttered no reply whatever. He simply bowed low—very low, indeed—and passed on without seeming to notice the outstretched hand. "I presume that was proper?" he said, sotto voce, to McMichael, when he was beyond the Vermonter's hearing. "If you ask me that for my opinion," replied McMichael, very deliberately, and weighing every word, "I shall say no." The answer was received in silence. Blaine's nimble instincts told him that something had occurred which never ought to have occurred. Naturally, neither he nor the Senator cares to discuss the subject for the benefit of the public.

Another dispatch from New York, describing "Why Blaine Feels Hurt," is in the following words and figures, to wit:

The Blaine-Edmunds episode continues to be the political talk of the day, on account of the persistence with which Frank Hatton and others of the younger members of the Arthur faction have persisted in parading it, seeming to have an idea that it would injure Blaine. Hon. Stephen Elkins, when asked the reason of Blaine's action, said he did not know anything further than that there had just come to Blaine's attention a letter written by Edmunds, in which he explained his refusal to speak in the Blaine campaign of 1884, on the ground that he was inimical to Blaine, and, in fact, had brought in question the character of Blaine. It has come out already, in the discussion of the Blaine-Edmunds episode, that during the last campaign of Senator Edmunds for reelection his friends appealed directly to Blaine to restrain the Blaine men of Vermont from attacking Edmunds, and that Blaine counseled his friends to peace and harmony. It is from a view of this fact that Blaine feels especially aggrieved over the Edmunds letter. There is some talk here over the failure of Blaine and Logan to meet, although both were under the same roof of the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

One account of the Blaine-Edmunds affair refers to the latter's persistent charges against Blaine's honesty, and says the presumption is that Blaine was not anxious to shake hands with a man on Sunday who had gratuitously slandered him on Saturday.

Discussing the question of etiquette thus raised (etiquette? well, we should say so!) the San Francisco Bulletin summarizes the cause of the coldness that "social and political circles in the East are disturbed over an 'unpleasantness' which lately occurred between Mr. Blaine and Senator Edmunds. The former was not Mr. Edmunds's choice for the Presidential nomination in 1884, and a letter has lately been published in which the Vermont statesman declared that while he regarded the election of any Republican better for the country than the election of a Democrat, and would, therefore, vote for Mr. Blaine, yet still he could not reconcile it to his conscience to go upon the stump and commend a candidate whom he honestly believed to be unfit. The point of this consisted in the fact that no one questioned Blaine's fitness intellectually; it was doubts of his honesty that led malcontent Republicans to oppose him. Read between the lines, Edmunds's letter amounted to an averment that, in his opinion, Blaine was a rogue. Under these circumstances, the two men met at Arthur's funeral, and Edmunds tendered his hand to Blaine. The latter gave him the cut direct."

Our contemporary goes on to comment as follows: "Society will probably justify the act. Etiquette tolerates social intimacy between political foes. Men may differ on the tariff or the silver question, or civil-service reform, and yet be the best friends in the world, dining at each other's houses and associating together on terms of intimacy in private life. This very Senator Edmunds had no closer personal friend in the Senate than Thurman, of Ohio, though there was not a political question on which they agreed. But a line must be drawn. That line is crossed when one politician assails the integrity of another. Assaults on his logic or his intellect are compatible with respect for his person. But to charge a man with knavery is to pronounce him unfit for the company of decent citizens, and it calls for resentment. If Mr. Blaine had accepted Senator Edmunds's hand he would have implied that he was indifferent to his reputation as an honest man."

"A citizen can afford, in certain cases (says the same paper), to pass over in silent contempt charges against his character. But this depends on the nature of the charges, and the standing of him who makes them. No man is bound to notice the abuse of a foul-mouthed attorney, or the insults of a blackguard." "That you should give me the lie, or otherwise," said gentleman Philip to the ruffian Hunt, "is to me perfectly indifferent." But a Senator of the United States is a personage whose every word commands attention. Especially if that Senator happens to be chairman of the Judiciary Committee, and express an opinion, not in the heat of debate, but deliberately, after weeks of reflection, in cold blood and in writing, is it incumbent on all whom that opinion affects to notice it at the first opportunity?" Other accounts of the affair maintain that it has been exaggerated for partisan purposes; that the meeting, so-called, of Mr. Blaine and Mr. Edmunds occurred in the reception room during the funeral ceremonies, Mr. Edmunds being one of a number of gentlemen who arose on the entrance of Mr. Blaine; that there was no effusiveness or handshaking on the part of any one, and that all the occasion required and good taste commanded was done. Mr. McMichael, however, claims that his account of the meeting was "taken on the spot," and is "the true business."

The unfriendliness which is known to exist between Mr. Blaine and Gen. Logan, and the causes which are said to have produced the alienation, are those described in a Washington dispatch of the 25th inst.:

A well-known Chicago journalist spent a portion of this afternoon in formulating for his paper a surprising statement, believed to be obtained from Gen. Logan himself, regarding the attitude of that gentleman toward James G. Blaine. Coming on the heels of the renewal of hostilities between Edmunds and Blaine, the Logan statement is suspected by some to be a shrewd bid from Logan for an alliance with Blaine's determined foe, Edmunds.

It appears that Blaine and Gen. Logan were at the same hotel in New York, during the Arthur obsequies. They had rooms on the same corridor and took their meals at the same table, but they did not call upon each other, and if they had accidentally met Gen. Logan would not have been the first to speak. If Gen. Logan had been anxious to see Blaine plenty of opportunities offered, and he sat within an arm's length of Blaine at the church without recognizing the latter.

The reason for this is found in the last call Logan made upon Blaine. Before the Republican Convention of 1884 Mr. Blaine sought a conference with Mrs. Logan, which could be did not expect to be nominated, and through her arranged for a coalition between the Blaine and Logan managers, William Walter Phelps acting as the go-between. Logan was assured that the Blaine strength would be cast for him on the second ballot. The day before the convention Phelps telegraphed Logan that it would be impossible to do that, and asked if he would accept the Vice-Presidency. Logan replied that he would prefer his seat in the Senate, and emphatically declined. Then when Blaine was nominated, the second place on the ticket was given Logan volens volens.

When Logan's friends returned from the convention and reported to Logan all that had occurred, and charged treachery on Blaine's part, the General got in his carriage with Mrs. Logan and drove to Blaine's residence, on Lafayette square, to ask for an explanation. They sent up their cards, and after waiting a long time, the servant returned with the message that Mr. Blaine did not feel well and asked to be excused. This was the end of the long intimacy between the two families, and Blaine and Logan have since met only in the presence of large numbers of people and in the most formal manner. Logan is said to be aching for a chance to publicly humiliate Blaine as Blaine humiliated Edmunds.

These things do not tend to strengthen Mr. Blaine or the other aspirants to the Presidency in 1888, if aspirants they are. The Republican party will be apt to look for a candidate in the person of some one of its distinguished leaders who has the fewest possible antagonisms among his own political friends and the largest possible power to make head against the common enemy. With the active antagonism of both Logan and Edmunds, and the passive opposition of the entire Grant and Arthur wing of the party it will be next to impossible for the Plumed Knight of Maine, to secure the nomination and election at the hands of the Republican party.

CHOLERA is spreading rapidly in Montevideo, and has caused so much consternation that the Congress of that country has adjourned.

The "Common People."

Speaking of the late ex-President, an "esteemed cotemporary" says: "Mr. Arthur did not mingle with the common people much." Whereupon the Washington Star demands to know: "Who, pray, are the 'common people,' and wherein did Mr. Arthur differ essentially from them? There was nothing in his birth, surroundings, accomplishments, or career to distinguish him from a couple of million other men born and bred in the United States, until he was elevated to high official position. And even these elevations, it will be borne in mind, were not the result of any extraordinary talent or special fitness for public service, but rather in recognition of his activity and efficiency as a partisan. To be sure, he filled creditably all places to which he was called; but that is nothing more than many others have done, before and contemporaneous with him. Let us, therefore, hear no more of this rot about 'the common people' in a country where all men enjoy an equality of opportunity, and where, as has often happened, those of the most unpromising beginnings have reached and filled honorably and acceptably the very highest social and official positions." This is very "straight goods."

A REGULAR old-fashioned stock-deal is in progress in San Francisco. Consolidated California-Virginia rose $16 yesterday in one jump, and is now selling at $35. This stock could have been bought, about a month ago, for less than a dollar. Private dispatches received in this city yesterday report the general belief that the booming days of '74 are about to be repeated, and even surpassed. A new crop of victims has grown up during the past ten years, and the insiders will, doubtless, reap a rich harvest.

THE SAUNTERER.

There were two well-dressed ladies in one of our street cars not long since. They both of them had the china epidemic, and talked of the "lovely effects," the "rare bits of color" and the "soft sunset lights" that they had painted upon their rare bits of pottery. You would have thought, to hear them talk, that their little painted scenes contrived nature's handiwork. Finally one of them remarked—with an air that plainly said, "The intelligent, cultured world is with us"—"But, Mrs. Smith, it is astonishing how the china craze is growing. I read last evening of a New York club that is paying $3000 just for a pitcher."

The Saunterer is glad that great, glaring, white houses are going out of date in modern Los Angeles. If there is anything disagreeable in the effulgent sunshine of our semi-tropic clime, it is a huge, white house, dazzling and blinding in its whiteness. Such houses do very well for country villages, where they are set round with trees and green hedges, but in the city and in our perpetual sunlight, let us have softer tints, the charming neutral shades now so much in vogue elsewhere. White is a good color for a tombstone, but beyond that don't give us too much of it.

***

A bright-faced, barefooted little boy was trudging along the street on Thanksgiving day, his merry whistle sounding as joyous as the soar of a bird.

"Well, my little man," said the Saunterer, "you are having a nice Thanksgiving, aren't you? Have you had a good Thanksgiving dinner?"

"Oh, I've had a jolly piece of bread and cheese, and a big turnover made of apples, and that's all I want," said the little fellow, with a look of content lighting up his round, rosy face.

What a splendid philosopher! He is better off than most of us, for he is rich in contentment, which is the best of wealth. Happy boy! The world might envy you.

One can hardly go out without meeting a disgusted crowd of house-hunters, searching in vain for a suitable house for rent. "Confound this blarsted city," said a pugnacious, rotund Englishman the other morning. "I've been on the hunt for a house the last three weeks; pretty near run my legs off, and haven't found anything yet. Your capitalists don't have a half an eye to their own interests, if they had they'd put up whole blocks of houses to rent, and they'd fill 'em, too. You ought to have at least five hundred houses more than you have for rent. If I didn't have more patience of a Job—confound it all—I'd have given up the hunt long ago and gone somewhere else. Bah! never worked so hard in my life, never did, that's a fact, as I have in this blarsted house-hunting business."

The Saunterer is inclined to the opinion that a new catechism should be written for the especial benefit of some of the conscienceless individuals in Los Angeles who have houses to rent. There are some honorable men among them who are content with a reasonable per cent. of profit on their investments, and who are considerate enough, notwithstanding the great demand for houses, to ask a not exorbitant price for rent. But there are others, regularly shylocks, who are asking 25 or 30 per cent. and giving by no means comfortable accommodations at that. Our new-comers cannot live on climate here any better than elsewhere, though it be of a rarer quality. They must have bread and meat, and they cannot afford to spend the larger part of their income for rent. People are coming here by the hundreds, and they want houses to live in. But don't kill the goose that lays the golden egg by asking the value of a house for a year's rental. Extortion is never a good policy.

Go out into the fields and the hills and you will almost hear the grasses and the roots astir in the warm sunshine of these November days. The rain, the calm, the rain, run up an inch a day, and there's moving life in the bosom of the whole great earth.

It seems to the Saunterer as though Los Angeles never had so many birds in her midst as now. They must have come in the wake of the welcome rain. How they twitter and flit from tree to tree, while their bright wings flash in the sunshine. So many of them are golden-breasted and golden-winged. Are they, too, partaking of the gold of Southern California's prosperity? I am making my notes out of doors, and I can hardly count the yellow-winged and yellow-breasted birds that are about me—and the yellow butterflies—there is gold everywhere in this sunshine.

Go where you may and the sound of the carpenter's hammer meets your ears. It doesn't seem as if there ought to be such a dearth of vacant houses. But the secret is, I suppose, that people are building for their own occupancy. People are coming here to make homes, and everywhere these new homes are going up. But capital ought to provide better for transient residents. It would be money wisely invested.

WASHINGTON.

GOSSIP ABOUT FAST HORSES AND THEIR OWNERS.

Senator Stanford and His Extensive Stables—How His Horse Threw Dust in a Pursuer's Eyes—Belva Lockwood and Her Striped Hose.

WASHINGTON (D. C.), Nov. 20, 1886.—[Special Correspondence of THE TIMES.] It has usually cost the government from three to four hundred thousand dollars to elect members of Congress, but this year it is claimed that the total will not exceed one hundred thousand. This is owing to some changes made by the Attorney-General in the instructions to Judges of the United States Courts and the marshals. There have been very few deputy marshals on duty, so that the expense was confined to the supervisors of elections almost exclusively. The supervisors are appointed by the United States Courts from the lists of United States commissioners and receive $5 a day. The deputy marshals are appointed by the United States marshals and are paid the same, usually being employed from 10 to 20 days. This year the Attorney-General limited the number of appointments and prohibited their employment for more than five days, except in New York. Thus he believes he made a saving of more than 60 per cent. in the cost of holding the election.

James R. Tyler has been appointed, and is serving as watchman in the Interior Department. President Cleveland might have used this as an illustration in his Boston speech. Mr. Tyler is the son of a President of the United States, and if he had lived and occupied the same relation in any other country, would be drawing a large pension and residing in a palace. The Mexican republic pays pensions to the families of their past rulers, even those that came in and went out by revolutions. It even pays an annuity to the descendants of Montezuma, who are thus enabled to live in idleness, and the family of Iturbide, who tried to overthrow the republic and set up an empire on the ruins, are dependent upon what they have received from the treasury. That is a good deal worse than if we paid a perpetual pension to the heirs of Jefferson Davis. The widows of Presidents Tyler, Polk, Grant and Garfield receive pensions of $5000 a year, but the payments cease at death.

Mr. Tyler is glad to get a job at sixty dollars a month, even if his father was once President, and has been a good while getting that. He is a man forty-six years old, was educated at the Military Institute of Virginia, of which Stonewall Jackson was president, and at the outbreak of the war went into the Confederate service with his fellow students. After the war he settled in Jerusalem, Va., and at one time was clerk of Southampton county.

I see that Senator Stanford is erecting a fine stable on L street, near the house he has been occupying since he came to town. He has more money invested in horse-flesh than any other man in the world. Robert Bonner has some horses that are more famous than any the Senator owns, and cost more money, but Mr. Stanford has twenty to Bonner's one, and raised them all himself, at the Palo Alto ranch, seventy miles from San Francisco. He has several hundred brood mares there and a great many stallions, with two or three thousand colts, which he reduces in number every year by auction sales in New York and San Francisco. His last year's sales amounted to over $300,000, which was an average of over $500 a colt. The pair of carriage horses he drives in Washington, large, coal-black animals, are the finest team in the country, and are valued at $5000 each. When he wants to take a drive in a buggy he is drawn by $50,000 worth of horse flesh, and has a single roadster that can trot in 2:15, when in training, and that he could sell any day for $30,000, if not more.

But with all this fast and fancy stock, the Senator is not fond of rapid riding, and seldom lets his horse out beyond a three-minute gait. Nor can he be tempted to race under any circumstances. Many people have tried him, among others Senator Sabin, who drives a pair that can cover a mile in less than two-thirty, but the California man of millions will let anybody pass him on the road who tries to tease him. Among others who have repeatedly tried to tempt the Senator into a race is a well-known professional horseman who winters his stock in this city. Last winter the Senator found this man was watching him, for wherever he would go to drive, the horseman would turn up, behind a spanking bay, and by his movements, although he never spoke, offered a challenge for a test of speed. It became very annoying and compelled Mr. Stanford to take unfrequented roads. Finally, one day, returning from a drive, with the stranger, as usual, at his heels, the Senator called one of his drivers, and said:

"Jimmy, I wish you would take this mare and fill that fellow's eyes so full of dust that he can't see me again."

This was just what the driver was aching for, and, taking the lines, he followed the impertinent horseman, and with a motion indicated that he would like to have a race. The latter was ready, of course, and the two started for the country. As soon as they reached the end of the city pavement, both horses were let out, and Jimmy showed the strange horse his heels so quick that the latter turned around, drove home, and never troubled the Senator again.

Congressman William L. Scott, of Pennsylvania, is one of the largest horse-owners in the country, and has two breeding farms—one at Erie and the other down at Cape Charles, at the mouth of the Chesapeake Bay. He always has a long string on the turf, but it costs him a lot of money, as his horses are not lucky in winning purses, and he is always many thousands of dollars out at the end of the season.

At his Erie farm Mr. Scott has the finest imported stallion in the United States, "Rayon d'Or." This horse was bred in France and up to the time he was 7 years old, won every race in which he was entered. Mr. Scott paid $40,000 for him, and brought him to this country for breeding purposes, not permitting him to go on the turf. The animal is well named, for he looks like a "ray of gold," being of the brightest chestnut, without a mark on him.

There is a messenger in the Treasury Department, on a salary of $720 a year, who drives one of the finest and fastest teams in Washington. He is the son of a Kentucky farmer, and raised one of the horses himself on his father's place. He feeds and grooms them with his own hands, and allows no one else to touch them. As soon as office hours are over he goes to his stable, hitches up and takes a drive with his pets, always alone. They can make 2:40 easily in double harness, and are very pretty animals. He has been offered $5000 for them, but would as soon sell his wife and children.

Tricycle riding has become a popular amusement in Washington, where the asphaltum pavements are so well adapted for it, there being nearly three hundred miles of streets as smooth as a skating rink, and the ladies have adopted it in large numbers. I suppose there are one hundred and fifty ladies who ride regularly, and there are schools for learning that are well attended. Belva Lockwood, the woman lawyer, claims to be the first of her sex to try a tricycle in this country, and she was on the streets as an object of ridicule three years before any of the more fashionable ladies who laughed at her attempted it. She had an old-fashioned, peculiar looking machine, and where she got it, no one knows. It was not so graceful as those of modern pattern now used, and was not so modest, for when the Hon. Belva went down the streets her striped stockings looked as if the engine she rode had a couple of barber's poles for driving rods.

Belva is off on a lecture tour now, leaving her business with her partner. She has a law practice worth eight or ten thousand dollars a year, while no longer ago than 1875 she was teaching school for forty dollars a month. Her nomination for the Presidency was an advertisement for her, and she would like to have it repeated. She has made more by lecturing since, than by her law practice.

FRESH LITERATURE.

WORTHINGTON'S ANNUAL: A Series of Interesting Stories, Biographies, Papers on Natural History for the Young. New York: Worthington Co., 747 Broadway.

Among the most attractive of juvenile holiday books that come to gladden the heart of Young America is Worthington's Annual for 1887. It is beautifully printed on fine paper and contains over 300 engravings, by the best artists, as well as charming stories, breezy sketches and pretty poems that go right to the heart of childhood. It is a book for the million, and Santa Claus will bring nothing that will afford more lasting pleasure to the little ones than this charming volume.

FROM MEADOW SWEET TO MISTLETOE. Pictures and Verses. By MARY A. LATHBURY. New York: Worthington Co.

This most delightful little volume consists of forty original and artistic designs printed in photogravure, from the original Sepia drawings, on extra size heavy drawing paper, with illustrative verses by the author. She makes the whole year sing, and in every poem is the breath of woods, fields and flowers. The volume begins with the meadow sweet of field and garden and goes on with appropriate illustrations and verses to the season of the mistletoe, appropriately carrying out the idea contained in the prefatory verses:

"And let good cheer run round the year
From meadow sweet to mistletoe."

GINEVRA: OR, THE OLD OAK CHEST. A Christmas Story. By SUSAN E. WALLACE, with Illustrations by Gen. Lew Wallace. New York: Worthington Co.

The story so beautifully told in this little volume is like a glimpse into the long-ago past. So vividly are all the scenes portrayed in the life of those old days, when the English baron lived in his gray old castle with his one beautiful and motherless daughter Ginevra, it is like the real Camelot whose name we have known and loved. It will possess a rare fascination for young people, with its threads of romance and its sad, tragic ending.

The book is printed on the finest of paper, artistically bound and finely illustrated. It is one of the choicest gift-books of the season.

REPRESENTATIVE WESTERN MEN AND WOMEN. San Francisco: Golden Era Publishing Company.

The prospectus of this forthcoming volume, which is to be issued by the Golden Era Publishing Company, of San Francisco, has been received. Maj. P. S. Dorney, of the Golden Era staff, is now in this city in the interest of the proposed work. If carefully and truthfully compiled the work cannot fail to prove valuable and interesting.

November.

The year is waning! Solemn sounds are heard
Among the branches of each wind-tossed tree;
Brown looks the grass; no floral gems we see;
Forsaken nests by winds and storms are stirred.
And not by wing of bird.

The skies look cold—wind-driven clouds send by,
While fitful gales whirl sere, dry leaves away;
Fair once, like friends who come to us one day,
Creep to the heart, bring love-light to the eye,
Then droop and fade and die.

Yet, while the winds blow chill and summer joys depart,
A host of other pleasures now doth come:
Brothers and sisters, scattered, all come home,
Thanksgiving cheer abounds, while fond smiles start
As heart responds to heart.

Then, curtains down, around the fire we press,
To sing and jest, to romp and laugh and play;
But while the fun goes round, each heart can say,
"November brings Thanksgiving. Lord, we bless Thee for our happiness!"

LOCALITIES.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN IS NOW OUT OF THE ASYLUM.

Probably Fatal Consequences of the Cutter Lodged in Sullivan's Leg—Mooney's Assault Case—Brief's.

About 500 persons assembled at Hall last night to see John L. Sullivan, chiefest among the famous pugilists. There was no fighting, and the audience was simply a display of muscle and a panorama of John L.'s admirers. The chief events of the evening were rounds between Sullivan and Dempsey, much more spirited rounds between Sullivan and La Blanche, and four rounds of sparring with wind-up between Sullivan and Taylor. Between the last two rounds of the latter affair, Sullivan, who returned pugilist, was introduced to the audience as a man who had once been one of them, but was now trying to live down his past and uphold God and humanity. He said he believe in prize-fighting, but did believe in physical culture, and he would rather see cars for one's self. He hoped that the audience would come and hear him at the Episcopal Church to-night.

A Cutting Affray.

Colina Sanchez, a young man of Los Nietos, aged about 20 years, was brought up in the city jail yesterday morning by Deputy Sheriff Rowland, and is charged with fearfully cutting a man named Dominguez at the latter's home last night. It is said that Dominguez was terribly carved in the abdomen and will die. Sanchez is only 20 years old, but must have known him long, for he is a young fellow of good reputation.

Mooney's Case.

W. S. Mooney, of Mooney's Grand Opera Hall, Nadeau. The growth of the city is phenomenal. Mr. Mooney is the owner of a portion of his estate, adjoining which he intends to sell in lots of five acres, with an assured residence, costing not less than $2000, to be erected on each lot sold, within a year from date of sale. This is no gobbling of the property, to often retard the growth of a settlement by simply holding it for a raise.

A Tramp.

James Riley, a muscular and well-dressed tramp from Arizona, was one of several tramps, last night, at the police station. Angeles and Commercial streets. Bosqui started to arrest him, but Riley showed fight. Bosqui pounced upon him over the head and shoulders with a billy, landing it in the pit of the fellow's stomach. He was booked for disorderly conduct.

A Card.

Mr. J. A. Brown, proprietor of the well-known Brown's Bakery and Restaurant, takes pleasure in announcing to his numerous patrons that after having returned, he is united to continue filling all orders for bread, etc. The embarrassing situation of yesterday he satisfactorily explained. It appears that employés of all the bakeries in the city, not being well treated as to board, lodging, payment and hours of labor, found it necessary to organize, form resolutions and rules, in order to enforce better treatment. Mr. Brown, on inquiring if his employés had any such complaints to make, and receiving a negative answer, refused to sign their resolutions. His men were then ordered by the union not to continue work, thinking to thereby inconvenience him so as to compel him to comply with their wishes. But their plans greatly baffled, as Mr. Brown felt himself equal to the emergency, making bread enough to supply the demands of his restaurant and a very small portion of his customers. His men, after holding out two days, found that the union could not replace their situations, consequently these not belonging to it, returned, and have now made their formal resignations to the order and recommenced to work this morning. To the proprietors of the other bakeries who have not before got out of bed to bread of them, he returns thanks, and wishes to inform them that he would not feel sorry for his patrons by placing their sour bread on his tables.

Antonia, M.D., the well-known specialist and medical writer, who had an immense practice among the elite of San Francisco for over 16 years, is at the St. Elmo, waiting to open her office here for a short time. Born in Paris, she has been over all Europe almost; also went to Australia, to China and Japan, where she added to her knowledge by visiting hospitals and scientific institutions. NOT A TAIL TO RIVERSIDE.

RIVERSIDE, Nov. 27.—[To the Editor of THE TIMES.] A handsome pamphlet has just appeared, published in your city, entitled "Southern California," and issued by Warner Bros. to advertise their excursions and give Eastern people information about this section. No doubt it will be extensively circulated, and is likely to mislead seriously if the remainder of the book is as inaccurate as the first four pages. The opening article is entitled "Riverside and its environs," but it says little about either Riverside or its environs. What it does say is about a place, if such a place there be, called "East Riverside Extension." To quote:

"The local and flourishing colonies of Old San Bernardino, Redlands, Lugonia and Crafton are already embraced within the boundaries of East Riverside Extension. These local names will be retained for local convenience, just as Arlington retains its local name, though within the incorporated limits of Riverside."

Several intelligent citizens of Lugonia and Redlands were astonished and not altogether pleased to find a new name bestowed on them without their consent. We think highly of Riverside, but it is our misfortune to be 15 or 20 miles from that enterprising town. Has Riverside taken us under its wings without even saying "by your leave"? We fondly thought we had names enough in this valley before; how came we to get this additional appellation of seven syllables fastened on us? Must we be the "extension" of an extension? If we are East anything, one would suppose it should be our principal trading center, "East San Bernardino." But if the object of giving us a borrowed name is to add value to our lands, why not call us by the still more ambitious name of "South San Francisco"?

There is another bit of information in the article:

"The Southern Pacific Railroad runs directly through East Riverside Extension, and has two freight and passenger depots within it, at Mound City and Brookside stations. No other part of the Pacific Coast has more ample railroad facilities than the San Bernardino Valley."

Now we are unreasonable enough to be at the present moment seeking and expecting a railroad; for if any railroad now "runs directly through" the locality described, it is invisible to human eyes. Where are those "two freight and passenger depots?" Surely the uninhabited shanty at Mound City is not much of a station; still less is the unsheltered platform that constitutes the whole of the "railroad facilities" at what is called Brookside. Unlucky travelers who have been dumped in the darkness at one of these apologies for a flag station, where there is no ticket nor telegraph office, stationmaster or employé of any sort, will appreciate the joke of the "ample railroad facilities" and the "two freight and passenger depots."

Speaking of the Chicago colony which has been located between Redlands and Crafton, the pamphlet says: "The committee (three gentlemen sent out from Chicago to explore) selected East Riverside Extension, and have unanimously recommended it to the association." I question whether either of the committee has so much as heard of "East Riverside Extension." Certainly we who live in close neighborhood to the lands of the Chicago colony never did till we saw this pamphlet.

To us who dwell here the strange romancing in this pamphlet may, perhaps, do no harm and be merely amusing. But consider what must be the effect upon settlers arriving from the East. Desiring to reach Lugonia or Redlands, and learning from this pamphlet that these places are in "East Riverside Extension," they will naturally go to Riverside to find their way from that city; for where should the "environs" of a town be but somewhere near it? When they learn, as of course they will, that no such place is known as "East Riverside Extension," they will easily be persuaded to settle in Riverside or East Riverside, whose gain will be our loss.

We do not wish to be appended to any place without our own consent, but prefer to stand upon our own merits; nor do we admit the right of anybody but ourselves to fasten upon us a new, long and inappropriate name.

A LUGONIAN.

"GREAT NORTHERN" VS. SOUTHERN CITRUS BELT.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 27.—[To the Editor of THE TIMES.] The following telegram appears in the Sacramento Record-Union of November 22d:

"LOOMIS, Nov. 21.—The first shipment of oranges from here this year took place to-day. There were 300 pounds. They are free from scale or blight, full crop and well colored."

Evidently the above was thought to be an item of special interest to the "Great Northern citrus belt" and to the world at large; otherwise it would not have been telegraphed especially as an item of news to the capital. Let us see. We do not here count oranges by the pound, but by the box and carload. But 300 pounds well packed full boxes, gives at 75 pounds per box just 4 boxes! Now, Messrs. Tomich & Co., to whom I sold my crop, commenced picking upon the 15th November, and on the 20th shipped 77 boxes from my little orchard and 50 more from my neighbors near by, and they could have shipped as many more, well colored and probably quite as ripe as the northern shipment, made a little later. These 127 boxes, reduced to pounds, give 9525 pounds. Probably many hundreds of boxes besides were shipped from Los Angeles and other points in the county about the same time. Yet they claim they are six weeks earlier than we.

A LADY FOR THE SCHOOL BOARD.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 27.—[To the Editor of THE TIMES.] There seems to be a growing public sentiment in favor of women as helpers and coworkers in all educational matters. In a number of our sister cities they already hold positions of responsibility on various boards of education. I cannot but think that decided benefits would result to our public schools by an efficient woman on our own city Board of Education. It is true, our board has, we are glad to say, always been composed of honorable gentlemen, men who are capable, efficient and faithful; and it is not that these gentlemen have in any degree failed in their work that we ask for a lady among them, but simply that their burdens, gratuitously carried, might be more justly distributed, and possibly lightened.

The present business activity of our city makes unusual demands upon our energetic business men, and it is not without great personal sacrifice that they find time to attend to public duties. Much of the necessary work could be done by a lady freed from business cares and yet acquainted by long experience as a teacher with the workings of our schools and their needs. Again, the fact that a large proportion of our teachers are ladies, makes it seem only reasonable that they should have a woman as their representative on the board. One who could, and would visit them in their schools, counsel them in their work and correctly represent them before the board. We think Mrs. Ann S. Averill capable, by reason of her long experience as a teacher, her thorough self-discipline and high intellectual attainments, of filling this position satisfactorily and anxiously desire her election.

CHESTER A. ARTHUR.

Chester A. Arthur was born at Fairfield, Franklin county, Vt., October 5, 1830. After the troubles of his infancy were combated, he was taught the rudiments of his education by his father, who was a Protestant Irishmen from Ballymena, county Antrim. He published several erudite books, and from 1855-'63 he was pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church of New York city. He died at Newtonville, N. Y., in 1875. But to return to Chester A. Arthur. From his home studies he went to the schools of Schenectady. He entered Union College at the age of fifteen (1845), and graduated high in his class in 1848. During this time he eked out a slender income by teaching a country school. After his graduation from college he entered the law school at Ballston Springs, where he became a graduate after two years of study, going back to his former occupation of teaching school and becoming principal of the North Pownal Academy, Bennington, Vt. This was in 1851. Having saved a few hundred dollars, he went to New York and entered the law office of Erastus D. Culver. He was admitted to the bar in 1852, and became a member of the firm of Culver, Partsen & Arthur, which was dissolved in 1857. Soon after his admission to the bar, he married a daughter of Lieut. Herndon. She died in January, 1880, leaving him two children. The late Charles O'Conner and Henry L. Clinton were the opponents of Arthur and William M. Evarts in a slavery case in 1852, but were beaten by Evarts and Arthur at every point. At the outbreak of the war he was appointed engineer-in-chief on the staff of Gov. E. D. Morgan, of New York, and in 1862 was advanced to the rank of quartermaster-general. In the same year he was invited to be present at a meeting of Governors held in New York, for discussing measures to provide troops to carry on the war. He was the only person present who was not a Governor. At the expiration of Governor Morton's term of office he returned to his law practice. He was a delegate to the Saratoga Convention that formed the Republican party in New York. He was appointed Collector of the port of New York by Grant in 1871; at the expiration of his term he was reappointed and unanimously confirmed by the Senate. He was removed by President Hayes in 1878. He was nominated for the Vice-Presidency, at the evening session of the Convention. His opponents were E. B. Washburne, Illinois; ex-Gov. Jewell, Connecticut; Judge Settle, Florida, and Horace Maynard, Tennessee. He assumed office with Garfield and upon the death of the latter became President. His administration has been clean and pure and few if any are the objections heard against him.

Sa Carte des Danses.

A dainty trifle, silk and lace,
All white and palest blue;
A pencil hangs below the place
Where it is bent in two.

A silken cord upon her arm,
So soft and round and white,
Suspends, secure from every harm,
This little book to-night.

Within the tiny tome I glance:
The ball has just begun,
But some one's taken every dance,
She might have saved me one.

I look along the list of names,
And looking there I see
That every waltz some fellow claims
Whose name begins with D.

I'm hurt, and say so in a way
I fear is scarce polite.
But, as I turn, I hear her say:
"Don't leave me so to-night!"

Then, with a sudden, tender smile,
She whispers, "Don't look blue;
You might have known it all the while,
The D was meant for U!"

A splendid opportunity to secure valuable property at the trifling sum of $390 per lot, payable in monthly installments of $15 each and each succeeding payment $15 monthly, without interest. Forty houses without extra charge. Every purchaser a fair and equal chance to obtain one or more of these lots. In some residences, according as he or she may be the fortunate owner of one or more lots, the purchaser being entitled to a first and separate choice for every lot he or she may buy, and to choose every time his name is called the most valuable property unrecorded up to the time his name is so called.

The entire tract is beautifully situated, and the growth of the city is tending rapidly eastward, it is bound to become in the near future the finest residence portion in the county of Los Angeles. The whole of the property lots will undoubtedly double in value, and those lots fronting on Pasadena ave. and all streets radiating from will beyond question command a high figure, while the lots themselves are a first-class investment at the price quoted—$390 each—not to speak of the splendid homes offered to obtain one or more of the valuable residence lots. The title is perfect. The titles are deposited in the Bank of Rogers, Booth & Co.

Purchases of these lots are being made by residents of the adjoining towns, San Francisco, Boston, Chicago and many of the points East, a large number already having disposed of. Quite a large proportion of the purchasers are ladies, and we especially invite ladies who wish to invest about this property to call upon us.

If you want to secure a good investment at a very small cost, do not hesitate, but secure one or more of these valuable lots at once.

Lots can be purchased, and maps, circulars and all information may be had by application to

BUSINESS.

Stocks and Bonds.

Telegraph to the Times.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Government bonds dull and firm.

The stock market presented few new features. Reading and Lake Shore monopolizing speculative interest. In the afternoon, general stocks came more into prominence. They were strong and active, and in sympathy with Reading. Trading in the latter was on a scale never known, and its sales were almost as large as the business done in all other stocks. Buying was very good for both local and domestic account, and trading was stimulated by great excitement. Underneath all strong, the very favorable statements of the Lake Shore causing much comment. The general list was quiet and generally lower. The opening was firm, gains over Friday being ¼@¾ per cent. The general list was heavy and so continued the most of the day. Final changes are about equally divided between small gains and equally small losses. The only important decline was in Reading and West Point, 10 per cent. Reading, 34¾; and Lackawanna 1¼ per cent.

Money on call: Active; 4@5 per cent., ruling at 4@5 per cent.

Prime paper: Unchanged.

DEATHS.

PARKER—In Los Angeles, Cal., November 27, 1886, Mrs. Emma Parker, aged 25 years.

Mrs. Parker was the wife of T. H. Parker, of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and the daughter of H. I. Johnson, of Rockford, Ill. She was a sincere Christian, and the many friends of her childhood whom she left behind on our Pacific journey only a year ago, will join with those she has gained in California, in deeply regretting the loss of one whose provident love was to contribute so much to the happiness of others.

GIESE—In this city, Saturday morning, November 27th, at 8 o'clock, F. W., only son of F. and Louisa Giese, aged 3 years and 10 days. The funeral service will take place to-day at 2 o'clock p.m., at the residence of F. Giese, 230 South Hill street. Friends are invited without further notice.

PRINCE KOMATSU.

Prince Komatsu, the uncle of the present Mikado of Japan, arrived in this country at San Francisco recently, and, with the Princess and suite, is making a tour of pleasure and instruction through the United States, from whence he leaves for Liverpool to travel through Europe and across India and China, to their native land. Prince Komatsu is the son of Prince Fushimi Kuni-iye, who is the son of Emperor Ninko, father of the Emperor Komei, who died January, 1867, and grandfather of the present Emperor Mutsu-Hito. In his youth Prince Komatsu became a priest, and was known as Ninnaji no Miya, but left the priesthood at the command of the Emperor immediately after his accession to the throne, and was made a member of the council of state. The Prince has a military record, and bears the additional title of Lieutenant-General. He is about 40 years of age, is of medium stature, and might, perchance, be taken for an Italian at a hasty first glance. He is not the heir apparent to the Japanese throne, as is universally believed, as the Mikado has an only son, aged nine, and named Harunomiya. Prince Komatsu is, however, near the Mikado, being commander of the Imperial Guard, the body guard of the Mikado, which is made up of about ten thousand picked soldiers of the Japanese Empire. He has traveled extensively and has visited the United States some time previous, when he undertook a tour around the world. He received his education mainly in Europe, and thus has formed European habits and ideas, which he adopts universally while abroad, and to a great extent in his native country. His language, when spoken in English, is well chosen, but not free from the Japanese accent; his manners are highly refined and agreeable, and perfectly free from any display of haughtiness or ostentation. For the educated Japanese, those who understand the grammar of their own language, English is very easily learned, and thus it is that the Prince's language is found to be so choice.

PRINCESS KOMATSU.

The V-a-s-e.

From the madding crowd they stand apart.
The maidens four and the Works of Art;

And none might tell from sight alone
In which had culture ripest grown—

The Gotham Million fair to see,
The Philadelphia Pedigree,

The Boston Mind of azure hue,
Or the soulful Soul from Kalamazoo—

For all loved Art in a seemly way,
With an earnest soul and a capital A.

Long they worshipped; but no one broke
The sacred stillness, until up spoke

The Western one from the nameless place,
Who blushing said, "What a lovely vase!"

Over three faces a sad smile flew,
And they echoed away from Kalamazoo.

But Gotham's haughty soul was stirred
To crush the stranger with one small word.

Deftly hiding reproof in praise,
She cries, "'Tis indeed a lovely vaze!"

But brief her unworthy triumph when
The lofty one from the home of Penn,

With the consciousness of two grandpapas,
Exclaims, "It is quite a lovely vahs!"

And glances round with an anxious thrill,
Awaiting the word of Beacon Hill.

But the Boston maid smiles countenuative,
And gently murmurs, "Oh, pardon me!

I did not catch your remark, because
I was so entranced with that charming vawse!"

CATARRH.

THE TERM CATARRH IS APplied to a peculiar disorder of the nostrils and adjacent parts, which prevails to an alarming extent and is productive of very serious consequences.

The most prominent and characteristic feature is a morbid discharge from the head, varying in its nature at different times.

In some there is an almost constant flow of clear, acrid fluid, but oftener an offensive, purulent or muco-purulent, greenish-yellow matter is secreted, which accumulates in the nostrils or drops into the throat, necessitating its frequent removal by blowing the nose or expectoration, and often by both processes. Sometimes patients feel as though their whole head was in a state of rottenness, so great is the amount of matter discharged and so fetid is its odor. The patient is greatly annoyed by the constant dropping into the throat of the morbid matter from the head, and as a recumbent position naturally favors the flow downward, his rest is frequently disturbed from this cause. Many sufferers are obliged to lie with the head very much elevated in order to sleep with some degree of comfort.

In others a tough, viscid and offensive phlegm collects behind and above the soft palate, in the passage between the throat and head, adhering to the parts with great tenacity. Its lodgment embarrasses respiration and creates a sensation of irritation and uneasiness in the affected locality, which gives rise to a constant and almost irresistible desire to relieve the discomfort by drawing the mucus into the throat so as to eject it by the mouth. This process, popularly known as "hawking," is characteristic of catarrh, and proves as embarrassing to the one affected as it is disagreeable to the second him.

Again, the offensive matter hardens and deposits itself on the membrane in the shape of dry, hard concretions, which are discharged by way of the nostrils or throat in lumps or fragments of a deep green tint. In some cases these incrustations accumulate to such an extent as to form a regular plug in the nose, which obstructs breathing and produces serious discomfort. So firmly do these incrustations adhere to the point of attachment that their removal usually requires the most violent efforts; not unfrequently they have to be torn from the membrane. Occasionally a solid cast of notable size is expelled, on which there are generally traces of blood, but in some cases the cast presents a tubular appearance, being of exact shape of the nasal cavity. This condition is indicative of ulceration, which, in time, may destroy the bony structure of the nose, and produce a subsequent flattening of that organ.

Cases are occasionally met with in which a thick, viscid, stringy secretion coats the membrane of the nasal cavities and then putrefies, giving rise to a stench which is really overpowering, and sufficiently fetid to poison the atmosphere of a whole room; and there are others in which all the secretions of the membrane are suspended, causing an unpleasant feeling of dryness, heat and feverishness in the head and nose—a condition popularly known as "Dry Catarrh."

The disease generally extends to the air cavities of the bones of the forehead and face, giving rise to a distressing sensation of heavy weight or compression over the forehead, especially in the region above and between the eyes, and to a feeling of fulness, heat, irritation, soreness or pain in the nostrils near the root of the nose, as well as in the upper part of the throat, above and behind the soft palate. Sometimes there is pain obstinately fixed in some particular part, as in the temple, on the top of the head, at the back of the neck, or behind the orbits, and, occasionally, pain manifests itself in the face or of so severe a character that it is frequently mistaken for neuralgia.

The breath is always tainted and at times assumes an exceeding fetid and sickening odor. In some cases it becomes so revoltingly offensive as to render the sufferer an object of loathing to himself as well as to others.

The nasal membrane is thickened and congested, causing the nose to be stopped up, sometimes on one side, sometimes on the other, and often on both, giving rise to a disagreeable, stuffy sensation in the head, and occasioning violent and prolonged paroxysms of sneezing.

The voice is weak, indistinct and husky, or of a nasal character, displaying a sort of sniffling duality. Oftentimes there is a continuous hoarseness and discordance. There is also a sense of irritation in the throat, and frequent attempts to clear the parts of phlegm, producing the sound "hem," more or less forcibly. In some cases patients complain of an uncomfortable feeling of dryness, or chronic irritation in the throat, and in others of a distressing and almost constant dryness, for the temporary relief of which they have to swallow frequently. Others, again, speak of a constant bad or nauseous taste in the mouth or throat.

The stomach generally suffers more or less and becomes weak and irritable; the appetite is capricious and nearly always bad in the morning. The patient is languid, unable to perform mental or physical labor with the usual facility, is nervous, depressed in spirits, at times fearful, timid, agitated and inclined to drowsiness and sleep, the memory weakened and permanent impairment seriously threatened.

The mucous membrane soon becomes morbidly sensitive to unfavorable influences, and in spite of the utmost care becomes affected from the slightest causes, so that at last a breath of wind upon the lining of the nose or throat becomes productive of a cold, and gives rise to serious disturbances of the respiratory organs. Thus the patient is subject to frequent and repeated colds, each attack aggravating the disease by giving it a new impulse and involving a larger extent of surface than its predecessor. In this manner the difficulty spreads from organ to organ, invading the throat, larnyx, trachea and bronchial tubes, until encroaching further and further, it reaches the finer ramifications of the bronchi, when but a slight impulse is required to send it to the lungs. Catarrh may, and often does, affect other organs in the body, especially those containing a mucous membrane, such as the stomach, bowels, kidneys, etc.

By the employment of proper inhalations in the form of medicated vapor (not steam or spray) we are able to produce immediate and direct action upon the diseased surface in the pharynx and nasal passages, for air will find its way into the most remote and intricate cavities, where it is impossible to reach by any fluid applications. By these means every case can be cured.

Persons desiring treatment by this system of practice can use the remedy at home as well as at our office, and which will cause no inconvenience or hindrance to business whatever.

I have seen so many of these cases cured that I do not consider any case hopeless unless the disease has advanced to the chest and that both lungs are seriously involved. Even then the inhalations aid us in dissolving the mucus and in contracting and healing the cavities, which nothing else can do with the same success. The very best references from those already cured.

Those who desire to consult with me in regard to their cases had better call at the office for consultation, and examination, but, if impossible to do so, can write for a copy of my Medical Treatise, containing a list of questions. Address

CITY POLITICS.

THE REPUBLICAN PRIMARIES VERY SLIMLY PATRONIZED.

Delegates Elected and Councilmen Nominated—The Unterrified Hold Some Caucuses—A Quiet Political Day all Around.

The Republican primaries in this city yesterday passed off in utter quiet. There was no show of life anywhere except in the First Ward. The vote cast throughout the city was probably the smallest ever known here. When the blue-ribbon Fifth Ward casts only 39 votes, it may be set down as an evidence that the interest is not keen. Reports from the various wards will be found below.

In the First Ward there was the only approximately warm time, there being no less than four tickets in the field. There was one on white paper headed with a flag and the legend "First Ward Republican Ticket." It bore the names of Dr. E. F. Shumaker, R. Pollard, A. E. Dixon, F. G. Randall, Charles Elton, Allen Smith, F. Schueddig, F. R. Pitney, F. W. Tyler, W. W. Stockwell, G. W. Rowe, J. M. Obando, Sam Chase, C. H. White, George F. Abel, L. H. Emerson, T. W. Temple.

Another, also on white paper, but without any head at all, bore the names of L. H. Emerson, J. Lopez, F. G. Randall, Vicente Sotello, James Velsir, Allen Smith, F. R. Pitney, M. Wetzel, W. W. Stockwell, G. W. Rowe, J. V. York, E. W. C. Franklin, James Lockwood, Charles Wickman, F. Schueddig, J. McGraw, Dr. T. C. Marks.

The third, on white paper and only about two-thirds as long as the others, also without a head, uplifted to the public gaze the following cognomens:

W. W. Stockwell, James Velsir, Dr. E. T. Shoemaker, Gus Dietrich, C. B. Woodhead, J. McGrath, Hugh Sweeney, James M. Tibbetts, J. Lockwood, John McChesney, F. R. Pitney, A. E. Dixon, N. Knickerbocker, Sam Chase, A. J. Hechtman, Vicente Sotello, Robert Sharp.

The fourth and regular ticket, nominated by the caucus, was on blue paper, headed "Regular Republican Nominees," and ran as follows:

L. H. Emerson, J. Lopez, F. G. Randall, J. M. Obando, Jas. Velsir, Allen Smith, T. W. Temple, F. R. Pitney, W. W. Stockwell, G. W. Rowe, J. V. York, D. W. C. Franklin, Jas. Lockwood, Chas. Wickman, F. Schueddig, Paul Felt, Dr. T. C. Marks.

The following delegates were elected, 227 votes being cast, the vote received by each candidate is given after his name;

L. H. Emerson, 219; J. Lopez, 156; F. G. Randall, 217; J. M. Obando, 168; James Velsir, 163; Allen Smith, 214; T. W. Temple, 180; F. R. Pitney, 214; W. W. Stockwell, 241; G. W. Rowe, 215; J. V. York, 150; D. W. C. Franklin, 165; James Lockwood, 191; Charles Wickman, 150; F. Schueddig, 213; A. E. Dixon, 123; Dr. T. C. Marks, 153.

The Second Ward.

There was no stir in the Second Ward, only 143 votes being polled. George McLain was the only victim on the regular ticket, getting 69 votes to the 81 of William Morel. The rest of the following ticket was elected by very nearly the full vote:

R. Miller, C. E. Day, W. Clayton, C. Conley, J. Grimand, M. McNamara, L. Ledebetter, H. H. Appel, William Morel, E. T. Wright, J. H. Hall, J. Meridith, Frank Marsh, J. Manning, A. Cobler, J. Soares, A. Smith, B. Levy, J. Skinner, G. S. De Garmo, S. Altamerano.

The Third Ward.

There was a vast dearth of interest in the respectable Third, only 112 votes being polled out of nearly five times that number. There were two tickets in the field, identical except in two names. Sam K. Adams, who wanted to go to the convention, had got up a ticket scratching from the list of caucus nominees the names of two of the best men on it, E. B. Millar and J. C. Byram, and putting on his own and Frank Walker's. He made a win of it, too, getting 73 votes and Walker 72, to 43 for Millar and 42 for Byram. The ticket elected, with the vote, was as follows: L. N. Breed, 122; E. P. Johnson, 119; J. K. Skinner, 121; John Koster, 119; H. T. Hazard, 111; C. H. McNally, 112; R. Ranney, 111; H. H. Boyce, 109; Theodore Savage, 111; E. L. Stern, 113; R. B. Young, 113; Chas. Fickett, 119; C. L. Fisher, 119; John Crimmins, 113; J. W. McKinley, 109; E. C. Burtingame, 107; Geo. H. Pike, 112; Fred C. Smith, 112; A. Caldwell, 111; J. M. Guinn, 112; J. H. Book, 111; Frank Walker, 73; Sam K. Adams, 72.

The Fourth Ward.

The presence of death seemed to be in "the fighting Fourth." There was one ticket in the field, and it was elected, about fifty votes being cast. Following is the ticket:

E. Z. Powers, Al. Workman, C. H. Clark, M. Ellis, Sam Kutz, R. B. Russell, W. R. Wilson, Sam Gowen, J. W. Wolfskill, E. T. Cook, D. F. Donegan, A. N. McCurdy, C. H. Gorham.

The Fifth Ward.

"The banner Fifth" led the tail of the procession, casting only 39 votes. There was only one ticket in the field, and that pulled through, somewhat mutilated. The following delegates were elected:

Dr. H. Sinsabaugh, Richard Mercer, J. M. Campbell, O. T. Barker, William McIntosh, J. M. Stewart, J. C. Oliver, S. K. Lindley, F. C. Woodbury, R. D. Wade, A. P. Hoffman, Dr. J. H. Baker.

SECOND WARD COUNCILMEN.

Capt. Stombs and John Embry Get the Nominations.

According to call, 16 of the delegates elected from the Second Ward met at the Courthouse last night, to nominate two Councilmen. C. E. Day was made chairman and H. H. Appel secretary. About 50 persons were present

Outsiders—residents of the Second Ward—were invited by E. T. Wright to make any remarks that might occur to them.

Walter S. Moore, of the Fifth Ward, who described himself as a "representative taxpayer of the city of Los Angeles," then nominated Capt. Stombs, "from the hills," a tinner and an old resident. The speaker enlarged on the necessity of putting up a mechanic—a man in sympathy with the trades unions.

E. T. Wright nominated another man from the hills—Octavius Morgan, of Kysor & Morgan, architects, who had reluctantly consented, after considerable urging, to allow his name to be brought before this distinguished assemblage.

G. S. DeGarmo nominated John Embry, recently cook at the St. Elmo. The mention of this name was received with a storm of approval, in the shape of shouts and stamping. It was evident that Embry was the choice of a majority of those present.

W. S. Moore indorsed Embry as a "man who would work 25 hours a day." With such men as Stombs and Embry on the ticket, they would be successful—they would spend money to make it so.

Frank P. Kelly was called upon by H. H. Appel to make a few remarks. Mr. Kelly protested that he didn't belong to the Second Ward. He was informed that this was a free-for-all discussion and thereupon indorsed all three nominees, in a set speech.

A gentleman with a marked Irish accent, who said he belonged to all the labor organizations in Los Angeles, volunteered the remark that they couldn't nominate a better man than Morgan.

The delegates were then invited to vote, and after gathering around Moore for their final instructions, proceeded to deposit their ballots in a hat, in front of Messrs. Wright and DeGarmo, who had been appointed tellers by the chair.

Of the 16 votes cast, 15 were given to Stombs, 12 to Embry, 6 to Morgan and 1 to Kysor. The result was received with much yelling and three cheers for Embry. Messrs. Stombs and Embry were declared duly nominated.

Capt. Stombs, on being called for, made a few remarks and was followed by Mr. Embry—introduced by W. S. Moore as "Honest John Embry"—who, the chairman remarked, was such a good cook that he would have no trouble in cooking this Democratic goose.

The meeting then adjourned.

DEMOCRATIC DOINGS.

The Able Unterrified Nominate Councilmen and Delegates.

The Democrats of the First Ward had a crowded caucus at the Southern Hotel last night. N. A. McDonald was appointed chairman and Joe Davidson secretary. Nominations for a Councilman being declared in order, William Vickery—whom G. Butler Bosh Griffin had procured to be put up by the alleged "citizens'" meeting—and William T. Lambie were proposed by their respective friends. The first ballot was thrown out, in consequence of a tangle. At a second ballot 97 votes were cast, Lambie receiving 60 and Vickery 35. Lambie was declared the nominee. The following delegates were nominated to be voted for at the Democratic primaries tomorrow: William Lacy, W. R. Lewis, Joe Davidson, L. N. Mitchell, V. L. Sanchez, G. B. Griffin, H. Stuhr, C. Kearney, A. P. Anderson, Jerry Baldwin, J. D. Murphy, C. H. Watts, G. L. Mesnager, A. McDonald, C. P. Thurston, C. Hayden, C. A. Rowley, Uriah Embody.

The Democrats of the Second Ward met in Judge Brunson's courtroom, with J. J. McCarthy as chairman and A. C. Roques secretary. The following delegates were nominated: M. H. Kimball, M. T. Collins, J. J. Comoey, P. Ballade, M. Teed, A. C. Roques, C. L. Northcraft, H. Fenny, R. R. Dominguez, M. Methvine, Wm. Moore, J. A. Berry, R. A. Ling, J. J. McCarthy, P. O. Wilkinson, H. King, James Brenan, R. F. Sepulveda, Sam Moran, W. E. Stevenson, F. T. Steele, William Bryson, T. J. Duddy, Charles Gerson, Henry Sheir, W. M. Pridham, J. Yorba, A. Quent, Charles Schroeder, Allen Cann.

It was voted that these delegates nominate the Councilman from the Second Ward.

The Democrats of the Third Ward met in the Council chamber and nominated the following delegates: R. C. Carleton, J. R. Mathews, H. Wicks, J. Bryson, J. McCarthy, F. Harkness, C. Gasson, J. O'Neill, I. W. Hellman, W. H. Carlin, C. Jacoby, H. Baer, E. Roberts, M. Morris, A. Hamilton, A. F. Mackay and D. Botello. Fred Morsch received the nomination for councilman.

The Fourth Ward Democrats met at the Twos' engine-house, with S. F. Fisher as chairman and Ellis Powell secretary. The following delegates were nominated:

W. J. A. Smith, B. Chandler, G. Stevenson, Martin, W. S. Barton, W. W. Fisher, Ellis Powell, C. Alexander, E. Workman, E. Blennerhassett, F. McGinley, D. Morarity, Thomas Parsley, J. Donovan, Thomas Froelinger, D. Decker.

The selection of Councilman was referred to the delegates elect.

The Fifth Ward Democrats met at Morris Vineyard hosehouse, with J. P. Moran as chairman and William Crawford secretary. The following delegates were nominated: W. R. Burke, J. P. Moran, R. Dunnigan, J. D. McDonald, Charles S. Parcels, G. W. Glowner, John Maskell, W. A. Field, Louis Martin, Jose Correa, A. J. Cooper, John Weber, J. W. Deckman, D. E. Wilson.

D. M. McGarry was nominated for Councilman.

STATE AND COAST.

Paso Robles has a building boom.

Diphtheria is plentiful at Santa Rosa.

Stockton is getting up a paper carnival.

A double track from Port Costa to Oakland is soon to be commenced.

Southern California expects to ship over 2000 carloads of oranges this season.

Sixteen thousand excursionists are said to be booked for Los Angeles in January.

Many farmers have taken advantage of the cold weather to kill and cure their hogs.

All efforts of the officers to discover the murderers of the Martin family near Vulture, A. T., have proved unsuccessful.

The Governor has appointed A. Block, of Santa Clara, as a member of the State Board of Agriculture, vice S. F. Chapin, resigned.

George Moore (colored) one of the eldest stage-drivers on the coast, and well known by all Yosemite travelers, died Tuesday night at his residence in Mariposa.

The Standard, a Prohibition paper published at San Luis Obispo, has suspended and claims suspension is caused by the apathy and indifference of professed friends.

A Merced dispatch says: The preliminary survey for a new canal to take water from the San Joaquin River is being made. The proposed route will traverse a rich farming section 90 miles in length, and will open 40,000 acres for colonization.

The Consolidated California and Virginia mine will ship to the San Francisco office to-day twenty-five bars of bullion, valued at $110,000, and weighing one ton and a half. The shipment will represent the output from the mine for the week ended November 26th.

A man at Santa Rosa purchased a can of honey recently, and on opening it found such a state of affairs that he penned the following to the merchant from whom the purchase was made: "Sir: That can of honey I got was not fit for anything. It had a snake in it, and the snake had swallowed some mice, and the whole thing was mixed up."

The Woodland Democrat relates an incident that is said to have made a sensation at Knight's Landing recently. The story is that a young man discarded one young lady for another and had gone home with his second sweetheart from an evening party. The usual pause at the gate was interrupted by a pistol-shot from the neighboring shrubbery, supposed to have been fired by the jealous fair one. The young man fled the scene without investigating the occurrence.

The Longstreet Place.

As noted elsewhere, the large and valuable Longstreet place was sold at public auction yesterday at very handsome prices. No other portion of the city has recently made such material progress, nor shown such advance in values, as the locality of which the Longstreet place is the rallying point and chief attraction. The building of the Charity-street cable road this winter will greatly increase the boom there—already most robust. The Longstreet place has for many years been one of the points of chief interest to which all visitors must go—a brilliant example of the possibilities of a Los Angeles residence. The "home place," with its fine house and furniture complete, and its superb surroundings, is an ideal spot. This, with 20 lots adjacent to Palm drive and Pepper-tree avenue, have now come into the hands of L. F. Scott, as agent, who will undoubtedly have no difficulty in disposing of them at once. His office is at 203 North Main street.

A Bazar of Nations.

On Tuesday evening, December 9th, at Mott Hall, the ladies of the Church of the Unity will open a Bazar of Nations. In the goods that will be offered for sale, and in the costumes of the ladies attending at the booths, Japan, Turkey, Egypt, Iceland, Spain, France, England, and ancient and modern America will be represented. There will also be numerous side attractions, such as a fine floral booth, a Gypsy tent, Rebecca at the well, a very unique postoffice, ice cream, confectionery, etc., etc. Good music, a grand march in the various national costumes, and other entertainments every evening. The bazar will continue through the week, and it is the purpose to make it the most attractive ever held in our city.

WOMAN AND HOME.

SUNSHINE TALKS ABOUT THANKSGIVING.

An Experiment Which Paid Dividends of Happiness—Jean Ingelow and Her Later Poems—Household Hints.

I was sitting musingly in the bright sunshine of my porch this morning; watching the rain of shadows which the gently swaying vines were dropping along its floor, watching, too, the happy birds which twittering flew from bough to bough, and the wonderful beauty of the blue, rain-washed atmosphere, so clear, shining and transparent, and thinking how far from applicable to these glorious November days would be the somber lines of Bryant:

"The melancholy days have come,
The saddest of the year."

when I saw Mrs. Blanque with her cheerful face, coming in through the open gateway.

Now I shall know all about her Thanksgiving experiment, thought I, and I am pretty sure that it was not a failure, she has such a cheerful look.

"Ah, good morning, Susan," said she, "the heart of the morning to you,' as my Biddy would say. I could not resist the temptation to run over and tell you about my Thanksgiving dinner. It was such a success that John has been rejoicing over my 'happy inspiration,' as he calls it, ever since. I can assure you that it was better than a lesson in the catechism, to me. Ah, you should have seen my eight old ladies, with their smiling faces, their prim, quaint attire, as they ranged themselves about the table. They looked as happy as a boy with his first red-topped pair of boots. More than half of Mrs. Pegys's wrinkles actually disappeared, and she was as gracious and cheerful as if she was constitutionally incapable of speaking a cross word. I chanced to be the only one in the room when she went into the bedroom to get her bonnet, and there actually came a great lump into my throat as she took my hand in her poor old wrinkled one and said: 'I thank you very much, Mrs. Blanque, for this beautiful Thanksgiving day. It has warmed my old heart up and made me think better of the world. Why, I've lived ten years here in Los Angeles, been a regular attendant at the —— church, and you are the first person who ever showed any interest in me, or asked me to sit down at their table. I expect I've been somewhat to blame for this, for I have had so much trouble I've forgotten how to meet people half way, but you've put a real Thanksgiving into my old life. Good-bye;' and the poor old soul actually stooped and kissed me with a very suspicious moisture in her eyes.

"Good by," I said, "and whenever you feel lonely come and see me. I hope we shall be friends as well as neighbors."

"God bless you," was all she said, but I saw her wiping her eyes as she went down the walk. I tell you, Susan, I felt that it was the happiest Thanksgiving I ever knew, and yet how little it cost me."

"I often think," said I, "of what some wise writer has said, that 'we shall be held responsible not only for what we do, but for what we might have done, yet did not do,' and I do not like to think of the opportunities that we have all had for making others happy, but which we have missed. We, all of us thoughtful mothers, teach our children theoretically to 'do good, as we have opportunity;' but how many of us set the example for them? You have made a good beginning, Mrs. Blanque, and I think that what you have done will be better than the catechism to me, too."

Mrs. Blanque smiled and said in her quiet, thoughtful way: "The world is so full of theories, and is lacking in every-day, practical effort. That is what you would say, isn't it, Susan?"

"I am afraid that is it," I answered.

"Benevolence in little things is lacking. We are all of us ready to take hold of any great philanthropic movement and do our best to make it successful, but we are apt to lose sight of the every-day needs of our fellow-men, to fail to appreciate the worth of a kind word, of sympathy with the poor and sorrowing, and of a ready helping hand to those who are tried and tempted. Poor old Mrs. Pegg! I expect there are many like her, who have warm hearts under the crabbed outer crusts of their lives, soured by disappointment or sorrow, that a little kindly interest would help us to reach.

"God helping me, I will not hereafter forget my neighbor," said Mrs. Blanque, with an earnest look upon her lovely young face.

"There are other Mrs. Peggs in the world, no doubt, that we may help," said I; "other lives that have been chilled by the frosts of neglect and poverty; let us try to help them."

That's a glorious little woman, I thought, as I watched Mrs. Blanque walk thoughtfully down the path toward her home. The world's lonely Mrs. Peggs will find a friend and a helper in her. All her theories she will put in practice. What a different world this would be if we were all like her in this respect! One trouble that we have in training our children is that they do not see that we put in practice the lessons that we teach them, and this half-way teaching of ours won't avail much with them. Do you think it will, reader?

NOTES.

Slender brass rods are much prettier to hang the bookcase curtains on than rods made of wood; have the rings small, although loose enough to slip easily along; one curtain is considered in a little better taste than two; it can be drawn to one side and caught back, and so expose all of the books to view with better effect than if there were two curtains.

Apple Sauce.—Brown apple sauce, to serve on the platter with pork chops, is made by taking a little soup stock, or, if you have some roast-beef gravy, it is still nicer; into this put the apples, which are peeled and cored and sliced; let them cook until tender in this, season with salt and a little red pepper. When the apples are done, beat them until light and soft.

A very nice sauce to eat with game is made of figs chopped very fine and then stewed gently with a little vinegar, sugar and spices; a small lump of butter adds richness.—[Exchange.

Bean Soup.—Soak a quart of beans in water over night; in the morning pour off the water and add fresh. Set on the fire, and when the skins rise to the top remove them. Boil until soft, allowing two quarts of water. Season with salt and pepper.—[The Household.

Almond sauce is very nice with cottage pudding. Pound one and a half ounces of blanched sweet almonds and two bitter almonds; add to these half a pint of sweet cream and a tablespoonful and a half of sugar. Put them into a sauce-pan; add the yolks of two beaten eggs; stir all together over boiling water until thick as custard.—[N. Y. Post.

Custard.—Boil the rind of one orange until it is tender; pound it fine in a mortar and add it to one tablespoonful of brandy, the juice of two oranges, half a pound of sugar, the yelks of four eggs and the whites of three; beat well for 10 minutes, and then add one pint of milk. Set the mixture on the fire and stir in one direction until it is set. Turn into custard cups or glass dishes and serve cold.

THE WOMAN'S CLUB.

Jean Ingelow's Poems—Her "Sweet, Homelike Verse."

[A paper read before the club, by Miss L. Freeman.]

The pathos of common life is the source of most of Jean Ingelow's poetry. The undertones of our familiar speech; the divine light that quivers in a tear, and flashes in a smile; the touching grace and guilelessness of childhood; the tender, sportive, startling tricks of memory, are all felt by her keen sense, comprehended, and molded into sweet, homelike verse. The tragic side of life does not escape her ken; she knows the blank of desolation, the tyranny of grief, the ruthlessness of circumstance. But her dwelling is amid the every-day; it is to the normal that she applies the poet's lens. Hence her neglect by the lovers of brilliant sensation, hence her hold over the quiet, thoughtful, philosophic observer.

"Rosamund," the opening poem of the third series, is a tale of the Spanish Armada. Even this thrilling episode of the national history is treated from the individual standpoint, and, with marvelous skill, made near and real by being given in the form of a narration by a contemporary. We are made to see what historians proper have not time to show—namely, how a great public event bears in upon the daily life of the people. We see the touch of a vast fear paralyzing the hearts of the willing men and self-sacrificing women, whose every effort and possession are freely placed at the country's service. We see how the cool courage of a few calms the excited multitude. The South country woman brings her basket of ripe apples, and forces them upon the gallant sailors as they press on board. The man who has a bag of money and goodwill charters a ship with "victual, tackle, shot, aught he can lay his hand on," dodges "the Spanish hounds," and succors the valiant little fleet. The descriptions of the English encounters with the foe are splendidly clear and vivid.

The poem takes its name from an English maiden who falls in love with a Spanish noble wrecked on the northern coast. Her father, discovering her feeling, abruptly dismisses the swarthy stranger to his own land. The girl pines for her dark-eyed lover, and, through her priest, sends him a message to say that she has been faithful to him even to death. The loyal Spaniard again dares the inhospitable English shore, restores his drooping bride, and bears her back with him to fair Cordova. The story is told by the father, the same who flitted out a tender, and, following in the wake of the Queen's ships, saw and described the great sea-fight.

In the "Preludes to a Penny Reading" there are some touches of tender humor, but the tenderness is more than the humor. "Speranza," a short poem, is one of the finest in the collection. It is a mature poem, burdened with the world-old pain that beauty never fails to wake.

The two children's poems, "In the Nursery" and "Echo and the Ferry," are pretty, sympathetic descriptions of child life. But their charm is too subtle for children's reading; only grown-up readers will appreciate them. Here is a verse from the last:

ONLY SEVEN.

Ay, Oliver! I was but seven, and he was eleven;
He looked at me pouting and rosy. I blushed I stood.
They had told us to play in the orchard (and I only seven!
A small guest at the farm); but he said, "Oh, a girl was no good!"
So he whistled and went, he went over the stile to the wood.
It was sad, it was sorrowful: Only a girl—only seven!
At home in the dark London smoke I had not found it out.
The pear trees looked on in their white, and blue birds flashed about.
And they, too, were angry as Oliver. Were they eleven?
I thought so. Yes, every one else was eleven—eleven!

It seems ungenerous to pick any quarrel with so winsome a writer. It is only because we would fain see all minor defects obliterated that we call attention to the few wrinkles on the even surface of the verse. The following beautiful sketch of the earth as it was in the beginning is spoiled, weakened, rendered puerile by the last line:

WHEN THE WORLD WAS YOUNG.

And I could walk, and went,
Led by the hand through a long mead at morn;
Bathed in a ravishing excess of light
It throbbed, and as it were fresh fallen from heaven.
Sank deep into the meadow grass. The sun
Gave every blade a bright and a dark side,
Glitter'd on buttercups that topped them.
Slipped
To soft red puffs, by some called holy-hay.
The wide oaks in their early green stood still
And took delight in it. Brown specks that made
Very sweet noises quivered in the blue;
Then they came down and ran along the brink
Of a long pool, and they were birds.

That unhappy statement, "and they were birds," shatters the charm and dissipates the poetry of all the radiant, joyous, dewy mead. A fault of common occurrence is the reiteration, till it has been worn threadbare, of some happy word or phrase. One wearies of being told to look, and look, and look at what charmed at the first glance. Very few, alas! are the thoughts, or feelings, or phrases pertaining to the higher life that bear unrestrained repetition. "Encores" are eminently inartistic.

GRANT IN PEACE.

No. XXVI.—PALACE AND PRESIDENT.

(COPYRIGHT, 1886.)

The first country that Gen. Grant visited after leaving England was Belgium. Here he was received as an equal by the sovereign. At Ostend messages met him from the King inquiring when he would arrive at Brussels, and the royal railway carriage was placed at his disposal to convey him to the capital. In that city, the members of the government immediately paid their respects and the royal equerries brought invitations for the General and his entire party to a dinner at the palace. The King's carriages were offered to the ex-President and an aide-de-camp was ordered to report to him during his stay. General Grant, however, availed himself of this courtesy only when he paid official visits. In calling on the members of the government and the foreign ministers he went in the royal carriages, attended by the King's officer, and also in his visit to the palace, but at no other time.

The invitations to the dinner were in French, and translated they read as follows:

"By order of Their Majesties,
The Grand Marshal of the Court has the honor to invite
Their Excellences, General and Mrs. Grant, to dinner at the palace of Brussels, Sunday, 8th July, 1877, at 6½ o'clock.
Frock dress."

The words "frock dress" (en frac) signified that court costume was not required. The notification was written, not engraved, on the card, and was doubtless intended to make the etiquette as little onerous as possible for the democratic ex-President. Invitations were also sent not only to the American Minister and his family but to Mr. Sanford, the former Minister, and his wife, and to all the American officials in Brussels, down to the Vice-Consul, who was an Englishman and never went to court at home.

On the day of the dinner the King himself called on Gen. Grant at his hotel. The visit had not been pre-announced; and there was not time after the carriages drew up for the General to descend the staircase to welcome His Majesty, but in every other way the King was received with the usual honor.

He was attended by several gentlemen of his court, who remained standing during the interview, and when they were presented to Gen. Grant they made him the same obeisance which they were accustomed to offer to their sovereign. The visit was short, as such ceremonies usually are among persons of exalted rank. Mrs. Grant was present, and the King conversed with her as well as with the General. His Majesty speaks very good English, so that there was no difficulty about the language.

Perhaps just here I may repeat a story that Mr. Lowell once told me about Mrs. Grant. Mr. Lowell was Minister to Spain when Gen. Grant was in Madrid, and made a dinner for the ex-President. Mrs. Grant was placed between two personages who, like herself, spoke only their own language, but Mr. Lowell described her ease and self-possession as quite inimitable. She appeared to converse continually, was bowing and smiling all the evening, and apparently as much interested in her companions as any one at table; an instance of fine breeding which it seems to me was worthy of a queen, or of the wife of an ex-President.

But to return to Belgium. The King's visit was made on the day of the dinner, and as such civilities are to be returned immediately, Gen. Grant inquired when he and Mrs. Grant could pay their compliments to the Queen. His Majesty knew that Gen. Grant was to leave Brussels the next day, and accordingly preferred that the ex-President and Mrs. Grant should come to the palace a few minutes before the hour for dinner, when the Queen would be ready to receive the formal visit.

In the evening the royal carriages were sent for the party, which consisted of the General and Mrs. Grant, Jesse Grant and myself. On arriving at the palace we were shown through what seemed an interminable suite of lofty rooms, and finally entered one where several of the ladies and gentlemen of the court were already present; the other guests of the evening had not arrived. It was July, and the windows overlooking the park were all open; the sun had not yet set, and of course, the candles were not lighted. The effect of the great rooms on the warm afternoon, with only half a dozen people in evening dress and half costume scattered here and there, was peculiar. The men were either in military uniform or frock dress, that is, dress coats, knee-breeches, black stockings and low shoes, with buckles, chapeaux and swords. Full dress would have required white stockings, gold lace and embroidery and other paraphernalia. The General and all the American gentlemen wore plain evening clothes.

We remained in that apartment while the company was assembling. No one seemed authorized to receive formally for Their Majesties, though the guests greeted each other as they arrived. Every one remained standing; indeed, I cannot remember that there were any seats in the room. After a few minutes to King entered to conduct Gen. and Mrs. Grant to pay their visit to the Queen. He gave his arm to Mrs. Grant, the General followed, and they disappeared, but soon returned, the King now coming only to the door, which was immediately closed upon him.

Shortly afterward the company were requested to take positions to await the entrance of Their Majesties. Gen. and Mrs. Grant stood next the door by which they had come in from the Queen. These doors were now again thrown open, and a courtier announced in a loud voice: Le Roi et la Reine ("the King and the Queen"). Their Majesties entered bowing, every one else, of course, making obeisance. The King was in uniform; the Queen, except for her jewels, was no better dressed than Mrs. Grant. The royal pair spoke first to Gen. and Mrs. Grant as if welcoming them for the first time, the previous visit being considered a separate occasion from the dinner. Then Their Majesties passed around the circle and each in turn addressed every one of the guests, talking a few moments with each, although the party was large. There were about twenty people present, members of the government and other high functionaries, besides the Americans.

After every guest had received some courtesy from the sovereigns, the King approached Mrs. Grant and offered her his arm; and then requested Gen. Grant to take the Queen to dinner. The King preceded the General; then the other guests followed in the order assigned them. I had the honor of going in with the wife of the Minister of War, I suppose out of compliment to my military title. There was a curious little question of etiquette among the American ladies. The minister was ill; he had no wife, but his daughters were invited to the dinner. Now, according to the etiquette of courts, the daughters of diplomatic personages cannot enjoy the rank of wives, and Mrs. Sanford, the wife of the former Minister, was, therefore, placed above the daughters of the actual envoy. The Queen spoke of this to Mrs. Grant. She said she was fond of the young ladies, but the rule was rigorous. I believe there were some heart-burnings; but Mrs. Sanford is known as one of the most famous beauties of her time. She was here at the very zenith of her charms, and no American could be unwilling to accept such a representative.

I had myself not very long before been appointed Minister to this very court, and had even visited Brussels with my credentials prepared, if I chose to present my letter to the King; so that I looked upon these ceremonies with a more curious eye than if I had been an ordinary stranger; and thought of the different part I might have borne on this occasion. But I had preferred a lesser rank at a more important place, and remained as Consul-General at London rather than take the post of Minister to Brussels. I went in to dinner lower down in the line, but I lived at the core of the world, instead of on the outside; for Brussels and Belgium exist only by permission of her greater powers. This sufferance, however, according to European theory, detracts in no degree from the ceremonial importance of her sovereign. In fact at many of her smaller courts her etiquette is more exact than that which surrounds imperial potentates. At Brussels there seemed a happy mingling of that regard for forms which in the Old World is still considered essential, with a courtesy which it cannot be said that every palace breeds.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

WHY LITTLE JOHNNIE SLEPT IN THE WILLOWS.

A Voyage in Verse—Sweet Sights and Sounds in Dreamland—A Letter From an East Los Angeles Girl.

A FANCY VOYAGE.

Come, Boys and Girls, suppose we take
A fancy trip to-day,
And sail for southern seas, beyond
Where spicy islands lay.

Far, far beyond the sunset's gold,
Beyond the rim of night,
Until new skies shall shine above,
And new wonders meet our sight.

Here lies a land of tropic palm,
And here upon the brim
Of rosy sunrise, lo! we see
A shining island swim.

The waves just touch its sunny shores
With feathery crests of white,
And birds of wondrous plumage rare
Sail in its golden light.

We hear the echo of their songs
Like twinkling music swell—
Like echo of the distant tone
Of some far silver bell.

We see afar the shining threads
Of many a crystal brook,
And fairy forms amid the groves
Are wandering as we look.

The mermaids lift their lovely heads,
All crowned with golden hair,
Their eyes are azure as the deep
That sparkles round them there.

But on we sail; away, away,
While thousand islands rise;
Till lo! above us, shining clear,
The Cross of Southern skies.

Still on we sweep, our sails are spread
Until we reach the verge
Of wide Atlantic seas, in which
The frozen icebergs serge.

No steamship ever sailed before
Upon this lonely deep,
Few human eyes have ever looked
Where these far waters sleep.

But soon the frozen sea we pass,
And near the Southern Pole;
But O, what beauteous sight is this
Our wandering eyes behold?

A wide new world we see outspread,
A continent of space,
And strange new fruits, and trees, and flowers
Make fragrant all the place.

Here, on the world's far southern rim,
Where fragrant breezes sigh,
This strange new world, before unknown,
Smiles 'neath a cloudless sky.

The summer zephyrs o'er it pass,
Winged with the scent of flowers,
And birds of golden plumage sing,
Through all the shining hours.

Here luscious fruits, of name unknown,
Hang ripening in the sun,
And honey drops from out the flowers,
With nectar rivers run.

And fairest mansions mid the trees
Rise marble-built and tall,
And tinkling fountains drop their spray
Of silver over all.

The rare rich blossoms that upspring
And ope their buds of gold,
And lovely crimson to the light,
In beauty manifold.

Far o'er the tallest trees uprise
Some lofty mountain crests,
They gleam as if they were of gold,
Or purest amethyst.

And there, along their shining paths,
That seem to touch the sun,
In garments made of woodrous sheen,
A troop of fairies come.

With mantles rosy as the dawn,
With robes of lily white,
With sandals like two water-drops
Clear shining in the light.

A thousand happy folk, and more,
Adown the mountains steep
Come lightly, as if each one had wings,
So swift are they and fleet.

Each has his burden, each one bears
Upon his shoulders down
A bundle that is beautiful,
With softest silk wrapped round.

We watch them, wonder who they are,
And who the foremost one,
Who walks before them like a king
As onward still they come.

They reach a grand old palace door,
On golden hinges hung,
We see the inner portals shine
As it is open swung.

We wonder who the king can be,
And who the lovely queen,
With eyes so blue and face more fair
Than we have ever seen.

Ah! there they are! The palace door
Again is open flung,
And downward to the wave-kissed shore
Those beauteous beings come.

O, tell us what this land, we cry,
So beautiful and fair,
With cloudless skies and blossoms sweet,
With fruitage rich and rare.

And who are ye, so beautiful?
They smile at us and say,
You know us well, for we do come
To you with every day.

For this is Dreamland, Sleep is king,
And we the fairies who
Smile on your slumber-land and we bring
All visions bright to you.

The bundles that we have are Dreams
We drop into your sleep;
The loveliest ones are those which we
Do for the children keep.

LITTLE JOHNIE.

Little John was going to sleep down by the river. He had parted the thick willows and found a little spot among them where there was room enough for him to lie down on the piece of ragged blanket that he had brought with him. His coat was ragged and faded; his little trousers were worn, and there had some great patches been put on the knees, which, though of a different color, had served to keep them whole and comfortable. It was Johnnie's mother that had sewed those patches on so neatly after he was in his little bed in the corner. But Johnnie's mother was dead now, and he had nobody left to care for him but a drunken father. Poor Johnnie.

Johnnie was a newsboy in a great city. All the long evening he had been running up and down the busy streets with his handful of papers under his arm. By half-past nine he had sold them all, and had gone home with quite a pocketful of bright five-cent pieces. On the way he had bought himself a fresh roll and a nice, hot cup of coffee, and he had gone home whistling as he went, whistling even as he climbed the dark tenement stairs that led to the bare room that he called home. Johnnie did not expect to find anybody there, for his father usually spent half of the night at a low saloon round the corner. He had spent two or three hours there that evening, and had come home just drunk enough to be ugly and brutal. Johnnie stopped whistling when he opened the door and saw that his father was there, and halted for a moment on the threshold.

"Come here, you young brat; kept me waiting long enough. Now fork over; gimme every cent you've got in your pocket," said his father.

Poor little John, all his precious treasure was taken, for his father turned his pockets inside out to see that nothing was left, then he gave him a sharp kick and told him to get out of the house and not show himself there again for the night. That was hard. Johnnie happened to be going to sleep in the willows by the bank of the great river, with no roof over him but the clear sky, with its thousands of stars to keep watch ever him through the night.

Johnnie's father had not always been the cruel parent that he then was. Johnnie could remember their little cottage home, with its lovely garden of flowers; he could remember, too, how he used to watch by the garden gate for his father's coming, and how his father would catch him up in his strong arms, give him a kiss, and then swing him up upon his broad shoulders and carry him in where the hot supper was waiting, and his mother stood smiling and glad. But that seemed ages ago as little John lay there among the willows alone and crying softly in the dark.

"O, if father wouldn't drink any more I wouldn't care a bit about his taking all my money. I'd be glad to work for him every day; but to think that every bit I earn has to go for rum, its just awful," sobbed Johnnie.

And don't you think it was "awful," too, children, when you think what a brute rum had made of his father, and think, too, of poor Johnnie driven out from home and going to sleep in the willows all alone on the lonely river's bank? I hope every one of you will join the Band of Hope, and will grow up learning to hate the terrible evil of intemperance that makes so many broken-hearted children and so many desolate homes.

Now here comes a very nice letter from a little girl in East Los Angeles. We are glad she has written, and hope that she will write again.

EAST LOS ANGELES, Nov. 22, 1886.

Dear Mrs. Otis: For my first time I am going to write a little letter to you. We read in THE TIMES of your sickness. I am very glad you are well again. I am only 9 years old. I am going to school in East Los Angeles. I read your Thanksgiving Turkey story, and it was very funny. I think the turkey about this time is a big bird. Yours, SADIE IRENE FRANKLIN.

The turkey did not grow quite as much as Johnny hoped for, but still it was a splendid big bird, and made a fine Thanksgiving dinner. E. A. O.

FARM AND RANGE.

ROBIN RAILROAD

Pursues His Thoughts in Raising Chickens.

[For the Agricultural Department Times-Mirror.]

That which I have done in the rearing of chickens may be done by others and done better, too, because they may have plenty of time to devote to the care of the young chicks, which I was compelled to bestow on my vineyard and orchard.

I know of no better way to show new beginners how to care for their young poultry than to give them a little of my experience. I raised 200 one fall, winter and spring, when I divided my time between them and my vineyard and orchard, and I certainly could have raised a hundred more if I had had the spare time. I did it thusly: I made a dozen nest boxes of inch boards, about a foot square and a foot high, roofed like a house, with back gable closed up so that the rain could not blow in on the setting hens; left the front open half way down so that the hen could get in and out easily, so as not to break her eggs by jumping down on them; put in bottom of nest a gallon of dirt, hollowed into a good nest, and covered with straw. I put thirteen eggs in when I found a hen wanted to set. At night I took up the nest gently and set it outside the poultry yard and that prevented the other hens from molesting the setting hen. I made this a standing rule, because the other hens will be most sure to lay in with the setting hen, if it is a possible thing. I gave those setting all the corn and water they would eat, because corn is the best feed to keep up the heat of the setting hen, which will enable her to hatch twenty-four hours sooner than a hen half-fed on poor diet, and her chicks are much stouter than those of a hen half cared for. I found out by experience that there were two advantages in doing this in the fall, winter and early spring, instead of summer. The chicks will thrive and grow faster than they will in the hot weather in summer time, and next fall, when eggs are the best price of all the year, my early pullets would be in full laying. In the winter time I was not troubled with vermin. Water is death on hen lice; so is kerosene oil; so is sulphur or grease. In the summer time, when I undertook to raise chicks, I did just as I have stated here, but I watched the nest closely, and if I saw signs of vermin on the eggs, or hen, I got a new nest, washed the eggs in warm water and put them in the new nest, after wiping them dry with a cloth, set the new nest where the old one sat, and threw the old one into water, which, in a day or so, cleansed it of vermin and their eggs. The nests being exactly alike, I found no difficulty in getting the hen to set in the new nest just the same as she had in the first one. I have done this thing twice before the hen would hatch, but her chicks came out all right. But I have been defeated at other times. The vermin sucked so much of the blood and life out of the poor hen that the setting fever was all gone, and she would leave the nest and quit clucking.

To take good care of the chicks after they were hatched was the next thing in order. To do this I built a dozen makee coops, after this fashion: I took four boards, two feet long and one wide, nailed two of them together with a lath, put the top together at right angles, and nailed them tight, sided up the back part with shakes or thin boards, so the rain could not blow in on the young chicks; nailed on these laths in front and next to the ground, far enough apart for the chicks to pass in and out till they were as large as quail, and from then up made it as tight as I could, so that rain would not blow in from that side. I had one awful, long fight with rats, polecats and skunks about that time. Killed thirty-three polecats and four skunks, but the rats were too many for me, and I fought them another way. I took two boards, a foot wide each, and sawed them off about one inch shorter than the coop was long, and over this I placed the coop, which answered two purposes; the ends of the coop extended over the floor, so that if it rained ever so hard the water dripped on the ground and the floor kept dry. I set up a board in front, as high as the open slats, and that kept out rats and polecats. After I had devised that little floor business I lost no more chicks by rats or polecats. If I wanted to let the hen scratch and flutter in the dust, I raised the coop just a little and walked her off on the ground; and then washed off the floor, and at night walked her back again, and thus I kept the coop sweet and clean, which is very necessary for the health of the chicks. When a hen hatched I put her into a coop and kept her there for six weeks. Then she couldn't draggle her chicks in the wet alfalfa, and her chicks never had the "gaps." This looks to me at first like sacrificing a hen, but it didn't do any such thing.

The best feed I found for chicks is milk curd mixed with scalded crushed corn or barley. Next to that is cornbreadcrumbs, but as soon as the chicks are big enough to eat wheat they need no other feed, besides that which they find in vineyard or orchard. I never put my chicks in the poultry-yard till they were big enough to roost in the trees, but set their coops near the house, so that we could care for them easily.

I made it a rule never to keep a hen till she is two years old except for setting hens. We could see when hens were gentle and kind to little chicks the first time they brought off a brood and those hens we kept, but the ill natured fighting hens went to market. A hen does her best laying the first year and a quarter of her life as a general thing, so I found it to my advantage never to sell any pullets, but young roosters and last year's hens go as soon as they are fit for market. It may seem rather expensive to prepare so many nests and coops and yet it is not, for they will last many years if taken care of when not in use. When prepared in this way with plenty of nests and coops, new beginners will save themselves a great deal of trouble in caring for their young chicks early of dewey morning or when it rains. Where my lady friends have a large run for their fowls and when they can keep more than four dozen hens they will be obliged to prepare more nests and coops than I used.

Hoping my lady friends that have been to see me about the rearing of young chicks will have a good time this fall and winter, I remain

Kindly and truly yours,

Some of the Ailments that Animals are Heir to.

[W. H. Paaren, V. S., in Prairie Farmer.]

KIDNEY WORM, SO-CALLED.

H. S., Galena, Ill.: Please give us preventive and cure for "kidney worm" in hogs.

Worms lodged in the kidneys of swine are next to impossible to reach or affect by any method of treatment. Often what is supposed to be kidney worm is rheumatism, in which case the animal should be comfortably housed and bedded, and fed upon cooked or steamed food. Over the loins may be applied some liniment of ammonia. The feet should be examined to ascertain whether there may not be foot rot.

WEAK JOINTS.

W. K., Lockport, Ill.: I have a three-year-old colt that is inclined to be weak in the hock joints. Is there any remedy?

Probably the continued use of bandages, frequently saturated with strong oak bark decoction may, in the course of time, prove serviceable. Meanwhile the animal should be strengthened by liberal grain feeding.

SUPPOSED STIFLE LAMENESS.

Subscriber, Maywood, Ill.: I have a horse in pasture, 10 years old, who for several months has had stifle lameness in his left hind leg. I don't know the cause of it. Can that horse be worked while being treated for the lameness? Please tell best treatment. It is the true stifle lameness, I know positively.

A horse with true stifle lameness of several months' duration will require the assistance of a competent veterinarian. True stifle lameness consists in the displacement of the patella, either upwards or sideways, and when it has been displaced so long it requires more than ordinary efforts to replace the same, if at all possible. It is known by the animal's inability to flex the leg, or bring it forward. Since you seem to think the animal might work while under treatment, we doubt that it is true stifle lameness.

THOROUGHPIN—BONE SPAVIN—LACERATED WOUND.

G. W. J., Fairmont, Neb.: 1. "I have a three-year-old filly that has a large puffy swelling in front of the hock and on each side, seemingly running through the joint; some call it bog spavin, and others, thoroughpin. 2. Also a four-year-old roadster gelding that has a bone spavin, which I have made three unsuccessful attempts to cure, he remaining as lame as he was before being treated. What can I do for them? 3. What should be done for wound by wire fence?"

1. The supposed thoroughpin may by degrees be reduced by continued moderately tight bandaging, frequently wetted with strong oak bark decoction, or by the use of a truss. 2. The means generally employed consist in repeated blistering, or firing and blistering. The treatment of spavin is often of uncertain results, and at best there will generally remain more or less permanent stiffness of the joint. 3. A lacerated wound may be treated first with a solution of one part of carbolic acid in twenty parts of cold water, together with bandaging and attention to proper cleanliness, and later may be used a mixture of equal parts of tincture of aloes and tincture of myrrh. In case of so-called proud flesh, dust the parts occasionally with powdered burnt alum.

The Raisin Market.

[Circular of A. Lusk & Co.]

We are pleased to be able to congratulate the raisin-makers of the State on the headway that their product is making on the eastern side. We are in receipt of letters and circulars advising us of the receipt of this year's shipments, and saying they are the best California raisins that they have ever seen. They commend the care taken in grading and packing, and they have made the discovery that California raisins keep better than foreign, California raisins of last year's pack being in almost perfect condition, free from sweat or sugar. We are this year selling California raisins into sections where they have never been sold before, and in those sections where it was difficult to get merchants to take hold of the California product last year they are buying in quantities this year. We have felt that this could be the only outcome of the raisin business in this State, though we feel that they have not as yet reached the position they merit. To-day they are in prices governed by and compelled to follow the price of the foreign article, whereas they should lead. Their quality warrants this, and we hope and believe that it is only a question of time when they will gain the position they are justly entitled to. The wheels of commerce turn slowly, and it is hard to get them out of the rut in which they have traveled for decades. Nothing will move them but persistence. We feel that this year is the beginning of the change, and that one more raisin crop such as we have this year will gain the position we covet. Advices received from our partner in New York evidences demoralization in prices of foreign raisins at that point. The arrivals of Valencias are large, arriving in bad order, some affected by sweat and others being absolutely fermented. Of course these raisins are going to be sold, and, to some extent, are certain to affect the prices of California raisins. The prices on Malagas are lower both in New York and at point of production. Predictions are that loose Malagas will have to bear the brunt of California competition, while London Malagas will hold until December. We still feel confident that the early market is the best for Californias, and believe that time will prove us correct. . . .

We quote prices here to-day: London Layer Raisins, $1.55@1.70; Layer Raisins, $1.40@1.50; Loose Muscatel, 3 crown, $1.30@1.50; Seedless Sultanas, $1@1.40; dried grapes, sacks, 2½@3¼c.
